Post-War Program

U. S. Naval Hospital, Houston

THE Navy's newest and most modern hospital has just been completed and commissioned at Houston, Texas.

This hospital was first conceived in 1943 by Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, the Chief of Medicine and Surgery. After a site was selected and approved by the late President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the property was purchased at a price of $221,000 with funds provided by 353 of the leading citizens of Houston, Texas, and presented to the Navy as their contribution to the health and welfare of the men serving in the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, and for the veterans of all military service.

The hospital site consists of 118 acres located at the city limits of Houston, Texas, and approximately five miles from its center. The hospital will be on the perimeter of the great Texas Medical Center that is now being constructed at Houston.

The hospital is best described as "a city within a city," consisting of 38 buildings of various types including the following: Gatehouse; Administration and Treatment building; Subsistence and Welfare building; two three-story permanent ward buildings each ward having a capacity of 37 beds; 14 one-story temporary ward buildings each with a capacity of 39 beds; three sets of quarters for married officers; a Bachelor Officers' quarters; a Nurses' Quarters with a capacity of 150 beds; two sets of Hospital Corps quarters with bed capacity of 250; a Recreation building with swimming pool; Cooks and Bakers' quarters; Technicians' quarters; a laundry; Powerhouse; Incinerator; a Greenhouse; Garage; Maintenance Building; and Storehouses.

The hospital has a patient capacity of a thousand beds on a peacetime basis and fifteen hundred to three thousand beds in time of war, depending on whether or not double-decker beds are used. The hospital is probably the most beautiful, best planned, and ultra-modern hospital in the United States, or even in the entire world. It has all the latest instruments of precision that were perfected before and during the war.

All types of medical and surgical cases will be treated but will specialize in neurosurgery, orthopedic surgery, and plastic surgery. These cases will be brought to it from other sections of the country by ambulance planes that are provided by shuttle service that connects at Corpus Christi with the regular established transcontinental ambulance plane service.

At the present time the staff is small, consisting of 51 officers, 19 nurses, 200

First Army Applicants Screened; All Notified

The Adjutant General has completed the screening of files of all applicants who applied for commission in the Regular Army under Public Law 281 during the period 1 Jan. to 1 March 1946. This was the law authorizing the initial increase in officer strength to a total of 25,000.

All applicants who had not previously been informed of their status have recently been notified. These letters of notification were sent to the permanent home address of applicants as most previous applicants have had a change of station or been separated from service.

Under the provisions of War Department Circular 289, 1946, most previous applicants will have an opportunity to be reconsidered for appointment under the new integration program. These applicants have been sent a letter with copies of the correct form (WD AGO Form 62, 1 Sept., 1946, green) which must be returned to The Adjutant General through Army Headquarters in which officers are stationed.

This form allows the applicant to submit additional information for presentation to Selection Boards. The applicant may make a new choice of arms or services and may submit additional names of officers from whom he would desire evaluation.

Many of the applicants to whom the forms have been mailed have failed to return them to The Adjutant General. If they hold such forms they should be returned without delay and those who have not received some notice of their particular status should address inquiry to The Adjutant General, attention AGSO-R through their Army Headquarters, requesting information relative to the status of their applications.

Incentives for 3-Yr. Enlistments

Plans for establishing additional incentives for three-year enlistments are under study in the G-1 section of the War Department General Staff and The Adjutant General's Department. It was learned this week that enabling legislation will be offered when the new Congress convenes.

The necessity for such incentives is indicated by the fact that only 52% of recent enlistments have been for the full three year tour, the balance being short-termers. On the other hand studies have shown that the Army gets five times the useful service in overseas theatres from three-year men than it gets from short-termers.

In an effort to increase the number of three-year enlistments, the Department has sent the following message to field commanders:

"1. Since the inception of the Recruiting Campaign last autumn only 52% of the enlistments contracted were for three years.

"2. Studies made by the War Department to determine time consumed in processing, training, and transporting enlisted to and from the theatres reveal that the usefulness measured in actual services performed on an overseas theatre between a three-year enlistee and a short-term enlistee may be expressed in the proportion of approximately 5 to 1. It follows, therefore, that the short-term

Hickam Field, Oahu, T. H.—The headquarters of the former West Coast Wing of the Pacific Division of the Air Transport Command will be re-activated as a result of the additional responsibility and increased work load recently assigned by Washington Headquarters ATC, to the mainland side of the Pacific Division, according to current plans of Division headquarters, Hickam Field.

Pacific Division, on 17 Oct., assumed responsibility for air support of the Alaska department and for project "Nanook" now being furnished by the Continental Division, with the result that the Pacific Division will acquire the 1455th Base Unit at Great Falls, Montana, and seven more operating locations at Fort Nelson, Whitehorse and Edmonton, Canada; Fairbanks and Anchorage in Alaska; and Boeing Field and Spokane in Washington. The Pacific Division also has assumed responsibility for operation of the "Statesman" on a thrice-weekly round trip basis between Washington and the West Coast.

The addition of the former Alaskan Sector and its functions to the responsibilities of the Pacific Division make it desirable, from an organizational standpoint, to establish centralized wing control of all the mainland activities. Therefore, the Pacific Division has requested authority from Washington to re-establish a wing with headquarters at Fairfield to be known as the "Eastern Pacific Wing," which will exercise command jurisdiction

Selection of USMC Generals

Selection Boards to recommend officers of the Marine Corps for temporary promotion to Major General and Brigadier General were announced this week by Marine Corps Headquarters.

The board to recommend officers for promotion to the rank of Major General will be convened 18 Nov. Members of the board will be:

Lt. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, Lt. Gen. Harry Schmidt, Lt. Gen. Allen H. Turnage, Rear Adm. Walden L. Ainsworth, Rear Adm. James C. Jones, Jr., and Maj. Gen. Keller Rockey.

The board to recommend officers for promotion to the rank of Brigadier General will be convened 29 Nov., with the following membership:

Lt. Gen. Geiger, Lt. Gen. Schmidt, Maj. Gen. Thomas E. Watson, Rear Adm. Thomas R. Cooley, Rear Adm. Jones, and Maj. Gen. Rockey.

Maj. Gen. Bennet Puryear, Jr., (Ret.), will also serve on the board during consideration of officers for the Supply Department only.

Lt. Col. Robert F. Steidtman will act as recorder for both boards.

All brigadier generals in the Marine Corps, excluding Supply Department officers, will be considered for temporary promotion to major general.

Officers to be considered by the Board will include Ground officers senior to and including Col. Howard N. Kenyon; Aviation officers senior to and including Col. Clayton C. Jerome; and Supply Department officers senior to and including Col. Raymond P. Coffman.

Navy Halts Promotions to Ranks Below Commo.

No promotions to ranks of Captain and below are to be made in the Navy, under present plans, until post-war officer personnel programs are stabilized through approval by Congress of the new officer promotion plan.

Although selection boards will convene in mid-November to select officers for temporary promotion to Rear Admiral, the boards which in the past have successively chosen officers for promotion to Captain, Commander, and junior ranks will not be convened this year.

If the promotion plan is approved by Congress by next Spring, as is hoped, it is likely that boards for the selection of future Captains and below will be convened. The number of promotions to be made in the next several years, however, will be considerably lower than in the past in view of the accelerated rate of advancement during World War II.

While the new promotion plan will permit a speedier advancement in rank than under the existing permanent promotion law, it is estimated that eight or nine years will pass before ranks throughout the Navy are based on length-of-service requirements which the new plan contemplates.

In the meantime, officers whose advancement in rank was accelerated by wartime conditions will mark-time in their present temporary ranks, which will become permanent ranks if the promotion plan now proposed is approved.

The pre-war permanent promotion law contemplated promotions following seven-year periods—to Lieutenant after seven years commissioned service, to Lieutenant Commander after 14, to Commander after 21, and to Captain after 28 years.

During the next eight or nine years, while each officer's total service accumulates to match his rank, it is expected that very few officers will be "passed over."

Comments received from the fleet and shore establishments have, with few exceptions, acknowledged the new promotion plan as a great improvement over existing law. These comments have been condensed, and are still under study in the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

The draft of the promotion system has already gone to the Office of the Judge Advocate General for re-drafting into legal terminology. After thorough review in the Bureau, to assure that the legislative bill follows the pattern of the promotion plan, it will be sent first to the Army for comment, and then to the Budget Bureau for approval.

The promotion plan will probably be sent to the War Department General Staff within a week. The Army, which is now studying introduction of selection in its new promotion plan, will thereby be permitted to adopt whatever Navy principles of selection it may wish, and will be permitted to conduct a study of the Navy plan which the Budget Bureau will doubtless request. The Bureau of the Budget must approve all proposed legislation before submission to Congressional committees.

Economy Cuts

New Haven Register—"The Chief of Staff has promised to resort to every possible expedient to remain within this $8,000,000,000 budget figure and still do the job required. He is realistic when he states that he believes in budget cuts, within proper limits. Equally, he is upon logical ground when he declares that if it is found this present budget limit can't be maintained, the thing to do is to make the fact known and face the situation."

Minneapolis Morning Tribune—"The need for adequate military establishments is recognized universally. It is difficult for civilians to criticize military expenditures because some of them are still under wraps of security and the long range value of some of them must be clear only to the military. But with expenditures for Army and Navy in fiscal 1947 about as much per man in the armed forces as it was during the peak of the war, it would seem evident that there is room for substantial economy even in this field."

Dallas News—"The Army's eight billions includes feeding civilians in distressed areas of our military occupation, termination of contracts for World War II and so on. It is estimated that only about five billions of this amount is really going to national defense, and about three billions of the Navy's five billions is genuine national defense."

Washington Background Column in Philadelphia Inquirer—"The high cost of living has hit the Army just as it has civilians. For example, last spring War Department pencil-pushers figured out that they could feed a soldier for $299 a year. By late summer, the figure had jumped to $343, and the Army isn't quite sure what it is going to do about it. It can't cut the food expenditures, so it'll just have to cut something else."

Chicago News—"The Russian military and naval budget is to be cut to about 58,800,000,000 rubles for the coming fiscal year. At the official exchange rate that figures out at approximately $11,000,000,000. Russia's proposed trim is pretty small compared to our slashes. A total of nearly two billion less than the amount the Russians will spend. The differences actually will be greater. Truman has ordered the Army and Navy spending to be pruned another two billion and still another billion is expected in Washington."

New York Post—"There's been much talk, more scandalized than informed, about the fact that at least 25 per cent of America's peacetime budget has been earmarked for military purposes. Many, who should know better, profess to see in this heavy expenditure the spectre of a sword-clanking U. S. girding itself to frighten Russia back to her frozen steppes. A more decisive reason for our large military budget is the new methods of warfare which were startlingly previewed in the last days of the battle against the Axis."

Chief of Staff Addresses Forum

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, addressed the New York Herald Tribune Forum at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, 30 Oct. He outlined the Army's place in the post-war world and its task in keeping the peace.

General Eisenhower said, in part:

"In planning to cooperate in the development of a peaceful world, our government has given the Army police and administrative tasks in conquered lands not normally considered within the scope of military responsibility in a democracy. I hope it is clear that the Army did not seek to become the governing body in any conquered land nor does it have any desire to retain such a task. Quite the contrary! But, in keeping with its tradition, it is carrying out that vitally important work faithfully and efficiently in response to the orders it receives from you, through your elected representatives. It feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, heals the sick, houses the homeless, educates the ignorant, strives to make possible the rebirth in a peaceful life of those who a short time ago were slaves of totalitarianism. The Army is doing these things because our country believes that unless we give peace and democracy an opportunity to take root in fields where aggression has bred for generations, our victory in the second World War will turn to futile waste."

"A few, possibly from sincere motives, allege that this Army is a disturbing element in the world scene, terming it a standing threat to other peoples. But the countries against which, it is hinted, our Army may be aimed, do not need intelligence sources to recognize the absurdity of such charges. Our forces at home are, by every possible standard of comparison in this troubled world, the merest nucleus for security. Our badly diminished forces in occupied territories are there solely to enable our nation to maintain tranquility and to fulfill its pledged part in the establishment of peaceful governments and economies. Throughout those territories our troops are so thinly stretched as to merit the continuing attention of each of you, lest weakness encourage defiance and invite unrest or uprising, which might set in motion a chain of circumstances with deplorable consequences."

"The Army fully shares the yearning for peace of the earth's multitudes. But so long as there shall exist the possibility of attack from any quarter, it will never waver from its duty of standing as America's shield. On the other hand, the Army repudiates the defeatism that sees another world conflict as inevitable."

Warn Uniform Buyers

Many Army officers are continuing to purchase large quantities of articles of uniform which will become obsolete 1 July, 1948, when the new uniform policy stated in War Department Circular 88, 1946, is placed in effect.

In view of this fact the following letter has been published by the War Department:

"1. Section V, WD Circular 88, 1946, contains a detailed statement of War Department policy in connection with the uniform. The circular is being used at this time as the basis for planning and procurement. Fulfillment of all the provisions of the circular are dependent, however, upon the ability of industry to provide necessary material and manufacturing facilities in addition to the requirements for the civilian economy. Every effort is being made to meet the dates set in WD Circular 88."

"2. The matter of uniform applies to all components of the Army on an equal basis. No one organization can be given special treatment. Commanders will refrain from requesting special action in connection with any particular organization. The War Department will announce progress from time to time for the information of all personnel.

"3. It has come to the attention of the War Department that:

"a. Many officers are continuing purchasing the uniform prescribed in AR 600-35 in large quantities, and

"b. Some commanders are requiring officers to buy uniforms identical to those of the troops under their command. With reference to a. above, it is felt that in some instances the officers concerned are not cognizant of section V, WD Circular 88, 1946. Although it is not intended that officers will be required to purchase the uniform prescribed in the circular until its complete implementation, it is felt that all officers should be familiar with the provisions thereof and realize that uniforms other than those prescribed therein will not be authorized for wear upon implementation of this policy. It is desired that this information be brought to the attention of every officer under your command. Regarding b. above, such purchases are considered an unwarranted expense to an officer. Paragraph 2, section V, WD Circular 88 is interpreted to mean that the officer will wear a summer or winter uniform at the same time as the troops wear a summer or winter uniform. Commanders will not require the purchase of any particular type of authorized uniform to the exclusion of any other unauthorized type in the possession of the individual."

General Commission On Chaplains

The General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, an activity of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, had as guests at a luncheon at the Hotel 2400, Washington, D. C., 23 Oct., 300 clergymen, chaplains, and laymen, with General Omar Bradley, Administrator of the Veterans Administration, as the sole speaker. General Bradley outlined the developing work of the VA and stressed the approaching need of many more chaplains for duty with it.

Among resolutions adopted by the Commission at its session was the following: "That the Naval Academy and West Point weave into their studies elements of moral and spiritual leadership as they pertain to staff and line officers," and a recommendation was passed "instructing the Executive Committee of the General Commission to make more thorough visits to Chaplains in the field."

At a session of the Commission, Mr. T. A. Rymer, the new Director of the General Commission, announced that Chaplain Delmar L. Dyreson had been named Associate Director and that he would have the responsibility of editing The Chaplain and The Link, official publications of the Commission.

Mr. Rymer was formerly Senior Secretary of the Army-Navy Department of the Y.M.C.A., which has had branches at various vital centers such as the Canal Zone, Manila, Hawaii, San Francisco, San Antonio, and elsewhere within the United States.

Chaplain Dyreson, a veteran of the war, was on duty with the Third Infantry Division in Africa and Europe, completing service on 4 beachheads and in 5 campaigns, receiving, as a result, numerous awards and decorations. For the past year he has served as Program Director and Counselor at the Army Y.M.C.A., Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

On behalf of the Bureau of Naval Personnel, Rear Adm. William N. Thomas, Chief of Navy Chaplains, presented to Bishop Henry K. Sherrill, presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church and chairman of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, a citation honoring the Commission for its work during the war.

All-Electronic Color Television

Electronic color television pictures, produced by all-electronic means, were demonstrated publicly for the first time 30 Oct. at Princeton, N. J., by Radio Corporation of America, at RCA Laboratories.

A new color slide television camera, developed by RCA and used in the demonstration, produces signals from 35 mm. Kodachrome slides. Transmission of the picture on the slide is achieved in natural colors when a light beam from a kinescope is focused through the slide and separated into component colors by a system of mirrors and photo-electric cells.

Each of the three transmitted images—red, blue and green—is of the same number of lines, that is, 525; also the same horizontal scanning rate and the same picture repetition rate of 30 pictures a second as in present commercial television broadcasting.

The receiving set is equipped with three 3-inch kinescopes, which separately receive the signals representing red, blue and green. This trio of kinescopes is called a Trinoscope. From it the three color images are optically projected into a brilliant composite picture which appears on a 15 x 20-inch screen in natural color, free from any flicker, color fringes or break-up of color.

By this new advance in television, simultaneous color transmission, instead of sequential transmission, color by color, is achieved.

Military Leave with Pay

According to a decision of the Comptroller General, civilian government employees who are members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps may not be granted leave of absence with pay for the purpose of military training, but civilian employees who are members of the Officers' Reserve Corps are entitled to such leave without loss of pay.

The official digest of the decision follows:

"In the absence of statutory authority, civilian employees who are members of the Enlisted Reserve Corps may not be granted leave of absence with pay from their civil positions for the purpose of military training.

"Civilian employees who are members of the Air Corps Reserve (a component of the Officers' Reserve Corps), as distinguished from the Air Corps Enlisted Reserve (a component of the Enlisted Reserve Corps), are entitled to leave of absence from their civilian positions without loss of pay when ordered to duty for training or instructions, for not to exceed 15 days in any one calendar year, as provided by the act of 12 May 1917, in the case of civilian employees who are members of the Officers' Reserve Corps."

Col. Hall Heads Board

Lt. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler, Chief of Engineers, has appointed Col. Charles L. Hall Resident Member of the Beach Erosion Board effective 1 Nov., the War Department announced 28 Oct. Colonel Hall relieves Lt. Col. William B. Stelzenmuller, youngest resident member in the history of the board.

Two Cruisers Commissioned

As part of Navy Day observances, two new cruisers, the heavy cruiser USS Toledo (CA-133) and light cruiser USS Manchester (CL-83) joined the U. S. Fleet during the past week.

The Toledo was commissioned in Philadelphia 27 Oct. Of the Baltimore class, she has a displacement of 17,000 tons, a speed of 32 knots, and carries a crew of 129 officers and 1,840 enlisted men. Her commanding officer is Capt. A. J. Detzer, Jr.

The Manchester was commissioned in Quincy, Mass. 29 Oct. She is of the Cleveland class. Her commanding officer is Capt. Peter G. Hale.

Under Secretary Sullivan spoke at the commissioning of the Manchester, and Assistant Secretary Kenney spoke at the commissioning of the Toledo.

Seek Navy War Histories

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL

The Library of the Naval Academy is endeavoring to secure for its collection any war histories of Navy ships and stations that may be published. It is hoped that any naval officer responsible for the publication or distribution of such histories will communicate with the Librarian. Several publications of this type have already been sent to the Library, some of them of genuine merit. It is believed that the Library of the Naval Academy is a most fitting place for the preservation of such invaluable records of World War II.

It would be appreciated if you would publish a short note to this effect in a forthcoming issue of your periodical.

Unit Histories

Editor, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL:

The Library of the United States Military Academy is especially anxious to obtain copies of histories of units that participated in World War II. Many have been sent to the Library so far, but I am sure that there are even more that we have not received.

These histories furnish a vital historical documentation which will be useful not only to the Library but to all inquirers for generations to come. Doubtless there are many organizations that would like to have their record perpetuated by being kept on file at the Military Academy.

Army Personnel Organization

Maj. Gen. Willard S. Paul, USA, Director of Personnel and Administration, War Department General Staff, speaking recently before the Society of United States Medical Consultants in World War II at Walter Reed General Hospital, outlined for that body the system of personnel management in the Army.

After summarizing the War Department organization as now constituted, General Paul said:

"You will recall that the usual personnel organization consisted of an officers division, an enlisted division, and a miscellaneous division. In such a set-up, a policy paper, on promotion for example, would have to be acted on in both the officer and enlisted divisions and possibly in the miscellaneous division. In order to get away from this duplication of effort and reduce the necessary coordination, we have organized the personnel and administration division on a functional basis with four groups:

"Military Personnel Management Group
"Military Personnel Service Group

"Manpower Control Group

"Central Officers Assignment Group

"With this type of organization the officer or officers charged with promotion policies are completely responsible for that subject, whether it be officer or enlisted. The same is true for all other policy regarding personnel such as procurement, classification, assignment, welfare, emoluments and separation. I might add that the Adjutant General is organizing on the same principle and that overall efficiency has improved greatly.

The Central Officers Assignment Group may interest you in that it is a distinct departure from anything previously attempted. This group functions as the overall War Department supervising and coordinating agency for officer assignments. It is composed of a small control branch and the personnel representatives of the Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces and the Technical and Administrative Services of the Army. These representatives remain assigned to their respective chiefs and continue to act for him."

Following are other excerpts from General Paul's address:

"In the present post-war period and in order to be better prepared in the event of another emergency, the War Department is exerting every effort to make our officers, personnel-conscious. We are well aware that men are the most important asset of any Army, that they are also the most difficult to keep in action and replace, also that this activity was the most neglected in the past.

"The Army is big business and if we are to keep our books out of the red, we must manage it wisely. For the management of its men, we have adopted five fundamental principles, namely:

1. Have the right man in the right place by means of proper selection and assignment.
2. Increase his availability for work by controlling his absence from the job and looking after his welfare.
3. Stimulate his will to work by creating the proper incentives.
4. Increase his ability to produce by proper training.
5. Use him fully on essential tasks.

Atomic Energy Commission

With appointment this week of the five-man Atomic Energy Commission, the Armed services prepared to select Army and Navy officers to two advisory groups which will assist in the proper development and control of atomic energy.

Announcement is expected next week of membership of the Military Liaison Committee, which is created by law with responsibility for advising the Atomic Energy Commission on "all atomic energy matters which the Committee deems to relate to military application." In addition, a member of the Armed Forces is to be designated Director of a Division of Military Application, to be established within the Commission.

The Commission of five civilians, announced by President Truman on 28 Oct., is headed by Mr. David E. Lilienthal, who resigned as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Other members are:

Robert Fox Bacher, atomic physicist attached to the Los Alamos laboratory where the first atomic bomb was test-exploded; and scientific consultant to Bernard M. Baruch, U.S. representative on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission;

Sumner T. Pike, business man and government official;

Lewis L. Strauss, a Rear Admiral in the Naval Reserve now on active duty, who was prominent in ordinance procurement during the war; and William Wesley Waymack, editor, economic and fiscal adviser to government agencies and active worker for international peace.

The Commission will serve under recess appointments until their consideration by the Senate next year. Confirmation of Mr. Lilienthal's appointment will doubtless be opposed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who have long criticized Mr. Lilienthal's administration of the TVA.

The Military Liaison Committee, announcement of which will be made next week, is to be one of two major advisory groups to the Atomic Energy Commission, the other being the General Advisory Committee, composed of civilians. Secretary of War Patterson announced 18 Sept. that he will appoint Lt. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton as a member of the Military Liaison Committee.

Other likely appointees include Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, head of the Manhattan project, and Rear Admiral William S. Parsons, member of the technical staff of Joint Task Force One.

Public Law 585, creating the Atomic Energy Commission and its associated committees, describes the Military Liaison Committee as follows:

"There shall be a Military Liaison Committee consisting of representatives of the Departments of War and Navy, detailed or assigned thereto, without additional compensation, by the Secretaries of War and Navy in such number as they may determine. The (Atomic Energy) Commission shall advise and consult with the Committee on all atomic energy matters which the Committee deems to relate to military applications, including the development, manufacture, use, and storage of bombs, the allocation of fissionable material for military research, and the control of information relating to the manufacture or utilization of atomic weapons. The Commission shall keep the Committee fully informed of all such matters before it and the Committee shall keep the Commission fully informed of all atomic energy activities of the War and Navy Departments. The Committee shall have authority to make written recommendations to the Commission on matters relating to military applications from time to time as it may deem appropriate. If the Committee at any time concludes that any action, proposed action, or failure to act of the Commission on such matters is adverse to the responsibilities of the Departments of War or Navy, derived from the Constitution, laws, and treaties, the Committee may refer such action, proposed action, or failure to act to the Secretaries of War and Navy. If either Secretary concurs, he may refer the matter to the President, whose decision shall be final."

The Director of the Division of Military Application, who may be any active or retired officer of the Army or Navy, will receive, in addition to his pay as an officer, an amount equal to the difference between his pay and $14,000.

While lacking the administrative staff to carry out all its responsibilities under the law, the Atomic Energy Commission directed the Manhattan project to continue to function as at present.

This is the only agency known to handle fissionable materials, and would, therefore, be the only agency immediately affected by the appointment of the Commission.

Although the Navy has contracts with universities leading to development of atomic energy for ship propulsion, it was indicated this week that none of these research projects involved use of fissionable materials, but rather were in the line of developing heat resistant metals

Joint Munitions Board

Mr. Richard R. Deupree, civilian chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board, announced this week that the authority over service procurement vested in him by President Truman was requested by the Secretaries of War and Navy.

Mr. Deupree's authority over Army and Navy procurement was revealed late last week with announcement of portions of the directive outlining his responsibilities. Contrary to the report at that time, however, action by the President constituted no more than approval of a joint letter originated by the two Service Secretaries.

The order extends to Mr. Deupree himself—not the Army and Navy Munitions Board—final authority over matters pertaining to allocation and procurement policy.

The order does not establish the Munitions Board as procurement agent for the Services. Instead, it establishes a clear-cut written definition of Mr. Deupree's authority, which both the Army and Navy have acknowledged in the past by adherence to orders issued by Under Secretary of War Kenneth C. Royall and Assistant Secretary of the Navy W. John Kenney, other members of the Board, to their respective services.

Clarifies Service Differences

The statement of Mr. Deupree's authority is ostensibly to avert any inter-service or intra-service disputes over procurement.

The order, as released by Dr. Deupree last week, said that he is "specifically charged with the responsibility for making final decision in matters pertaining to the allocation of joint procurement responsibility between the Army and Navy."

"This includes the assignment of the procurement of any item to either department or to a joint agency," the order continued. "It also includes the power of final decision in the event of disputes between the departments arising from the determinations made by him. Such decisions will be binding on both departments."

Mr. Deupree, explaining the directive further, has issued the following statement:

"The services have been working toward coordinated procurement for some time. Much has been accomplished. The authority given the chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board by a recent directive approved by the President was requested by the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy in order to facilitate the continuing and rapidly expanding program which the Army and Navy themselves inaugurated.

"The ideal procurement is to have final responsibility placed on a single branch of the service to purchase a common item for the use of other services concerned. The agency charged with the responsibility of purchase would have representatives of other services sprinkled through the procurement agency.

In this way the responsible agency would have the benefit of experienced men familiar with the article in question as used in the other services.

"However, all products do not lend themselves to these objectives of acquisition. All products can never be purchased in this way, but the theory upon which we are working is to establish a procedure of purchase that is efficient and economical today and one that can be expanded 'as is' in case of emergency."

The Army and Navy Munitions Board began this week to implement the new order of authority, which was effective 15 Oct., according to Mr. Deupree. Copies of the Secretaries' joint letter have gone to Bureaus and administrative offices of the Navy Department, and to the Chief of the Staff of the Army for transmittal throughout the War Department by The Adjutant General.

Industry Cooperation

Progress is being made by the Munitions Board on a program to keep industry prepared for a changeover in an emergency and to stockpile strategic materials. The Board received $100,000,000 a few months ago to begin stockpiling, and it is estimated that around $300,000,000 will be needed for this purpose during the fiscal year.

The $100,000,000 was granted during the wind-up of the last session of the 79th Congress under a stockpiling act approved by the President. The Act contemplates the accrual of scarce but essential items at a cost of around $2,000,000,000 to be spent over a five-year period.

The Board's charter, as revised by Mr.

Truman on 18 Aug. 1945, also gives it responsibility for developing an over-all industrial mobilization plan in collaboration with government agencies and with industry.

Mr. Deupree said industry is responding whole-heartedly.

"Although we are only in the initial stage, the response of business men and industrialists has been encouraging," he said.

Touching on the board's functions, Mr. Deupree said:

"The board is responsible for development of an industrial mobilization plan which, when effectuated, will stimulate national economy and at the same time make it possible to harness industry effectively to the military need in an emergency."

"It is responsible for the administration and operation of statutes covering the stockpiling of strategic and critical materials. At the moment we are laying in stocks partly by acquisition of surplus from the War Assets Administration and partly by purchase in the market."

"The board is responsible for the development and expediting of joint procurement between the war and navy departments, and is assigned policy control of joint agencies lying between the services."

"And it is responsible for developing and expressing the military interest in all matters pertaining to our national import and export."

Industrialization Plan

Elaborating on what he called the major responsibilities, he continued:

"A skeleton outline of the complete industrialization plan has been developed. While it is conventional in that it follows the pattern of plans set up between World Wars I and II, it will be sufficiently generalized to permit rewriting from time to time in line with changing conditions."

"The board has authorized the creation of a group of civilians composed of men who had experience with W.P.B. in the last war. These men will develop a manual embodying organization changes in the WPB structure as the war progressed."

"The board has reconciled and formalized Army service and Navy bureau action on about three thousand war plants in which the services are interested and has cleared virtually all of them with the War Assets Administration for disposal."

"Many of these plants will be retained in varying degree. In some there probably will be established at government expense facilities for trial runs of newly-developed war products from time to time."

"Recently the board completed its pattern of all inter-agency, service and civilian advisory committees considered necessary to carry out industrial mobilization. There will be approximately 75 committees covering the industrial fields. For every military committee there will be a corresponding industrial group."

"This will place the military across the table from the civilian experts with the industrial know-how. No industry, no matter how small, will be ignored in this set-up."

"I have been asked when a written, explicit industrial plan may be expected. My guess is that the board, after a multitude of discussions and clearances, will come up in 1947 with a factual and practical presentation for continuous revision and review to keep pace with scientific and industrial changes and the international situation."

"The planning for the last M-Day program took seven years before the first draft came out. This time, because we have better statistical data on what is required in conducting a total war, and because the psychology of the country is different from that after World War I, it will take much less time."

"Real coordination in purchasing and its related functions cannot be accomplished easily. Necessary prerequisites are standardization of end products and components to the highest feasible degree. It requires similar procedures and policies in contracting, pricing, product and cost inspection. It requires proper timing in the purchase of large requirements of similar items and simultaneous stock review throughout the services."

"Standardization of any item for the services must receive careful attention. For example, in a radar set of similar operating characteristics, the army must have dust protection while the navy must have a set of comparatively small size and resistance to gunfire shock."

"Many of these differences can be reconciled. It is frankly admitted that ironing them out to the greatest degree practicable may take several years."

"Considerable progress has been made. The volume purchase of food and lumber are integrated. In textiles and clothing, footwear and petroleum products, we have close collaboration in buying. Our most notable progress has been made in the field of medical and surgical supplies. Here the services have established a joint buying office and have

Leave Policy Clarified

An interpretation of War Department policy concerning leave granted under the Armed Forces Leave Act of 1946 is contained in Section II, War Department Circular 316, as follows:

"1. Paragraph 4a, AR 600-115, 20 August 1946, has been interpreted by some commanders as a statement of War Department policy that leave afforded by the Armed Forces Leave Act of 1946, except for emergencies, is to be granted on an annual basis only. This interpretation is contrary to War Department intent. Exigencies of the service permitting, leave will be granted within limits of accrual to military personnel on their request.

"2. Periods of cessation from routine work for the purpose of travel, healthful recreation, and diversion are essential to the efficiency of persons in the military service. Commanders in all echelons will encourage individuals of their command to avail themselves frequently of accrued leave and, subject only to military necessity, all commanders will approve such requests for leave."

Enlistees Choice Not Binding

Applicants for enlistment in the Regular Army who indicate a choice of service, as authorized by War Department Circular 110, 1946, are being informed that their indication of choice does not constitute a guarantee that their entire enlistment period will be served in the major force, arm or service, overseas theater, or specific unit chosen.

Applicants for enlistment are now required to sign a statement acknowledging their understanding of the fact that they may be reassigned.

Following is an excerpt from a War Department letter on the subject of enlistment and reenlistment in the Regular Army which explains the situation which now exists:

"Due to the fact that the strengths of

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Rank of Enlisted Marines

A new method devised to reduce the present 34 different rank designations among enlisted men of the Marine Corps to seven has been announced by the Marine Corps Headquarters division of Plans and Policies.

Under the new system, men in the first pay grade will be called Master Sergeants and will wear chevrons now worn by a Sergeant Major.

A second pay grade man will be called a Technical Sergeant and will wear the stripes now worn by a Gunnery Sergeant.

Third Pay grade men will be called Staff Sergeants and will wear the present Platoon Sergeants stripes.

No change is noted in the fifth, sixth, and seventh pay grades, the rank designations, titles, and chevrons being the same as at present.

Even though the official rank titles will be reduced to one in each pay grade, the position titles of Sergeant Major, First Sergeant, Gunnery Sergeant and Platoon Sergeant are not to be abolished, and will continue to be used whenever applicable. The Bulletin states:

"The senior master sergeant of a company or comparable unit will still be the First Sergeant. In like manner, a battalion or a regiment will still have a sergeant major, and the senior noncommissioned officer of a platoon will still be the Platoon Sergeant even though for official administrative purposes he will be a Staff Sergeant."

"When the exact job of an individual is unknown, it will be appropriate to address a man of the first four pay grades as 'Sergeant.' When the duties are known he will be addressed by the appropriate position title."

The new program will require service-in-grade periods for promotion. The sixth months period now required for promotion to PFC will be continued. In addition, nine months service-in-grade will be required for promotion to Corporal and to Sergeant. Service-in-grade requirements for promotion to Staff Sergeant, Technical Sergeant, and Master Sergeant will be one year.

The new rank titles will become effective 1 Dec. 1946 and the first promotions will be issued under this program during the first quarter of 1947.

Transfers to USN

Because its transfer program is nearing completion, the Navy has shortened from four months to ten days the period of time in which applicants for the Regular Navy now on active duty must accept commissions following notification of selection.

The ten-day period begins with publication in semi-monthly bulletins of the circular letters listing officers appointed by the President. Commanding officers are responsible that notification is made in writing within three days after receipt of these letters.

"It is essential that the status of officers who have been selected for appointment be clarified in a more expeditious manner in order that the maximum numbers of officers can be selected to fill the available billets," Alnav 572 declares.

Sample letters of acceptance are included in the semi-monthly bulletins. Reception of appointment will be made in letters to the Chief of Naval Personnel via the commanding officer. Officers rejecting appointments will be processed for separation immediately.

Mr. John N. Brown to Navy Post

Mr. John Nicholas Brown, millionaire real estate man from Providence, R. I., was named by President Truman this week to the post of Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

He served in the Navy in 1918, and in World War II served overseas as a civilian under General of the Army Eisenhower. He is reportedly well acquainted with naval installations in the Narragansett Bay and Newport, R. I. area.

His overseas assignment was as Chief of Monuments, Fine Arts and Archives Section of the U. S. Group of the Allied Control Council. He was wounded by flying glass in a V-bomb explosion in England shortly after his arrival there.

Mr. Brown is 46. He was graduated with honors from Harvard in 1922. Beginning in 1925, he served successive three-year terms as a member of the standing committee of the Diocese of Rhode Island, until 1943. Following his assignment overseas, he resigned posts in the city government of Newport, as chairman of the Civilian Defense organization, the executive committee of the Red Cross, and as chairman of the Rhode Island war fund.

Mr. Brown is married and has two sons.

It was reported that he was suggested for his government position by U. S. Solicitor General J. Howard McGrath and Senator Theodore Francis Green.

USMC "Saved Pay"

The Comptroller General has ruled that, according to law 1st Lt. (temp.) George W. Stahl, a commissioned warrant officer in the Marine Corps, is not entitled to compute his "saved pay and allowance" on the basis of the rates of pay established by Public Law 474 on and after 1 July 1946. The official digest of the decision follows:

"Under the provisions of section 7(a) of the act of July 24, 1941, as amended, saving to Marine Corps personnel the pay and allowances to which entitled "at the time" of temporary promotion, a commissioned warrant officer who was saved the maximum pay and allowances authorized by section 8 of the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 at the time of his temporary promotion is not entitled to saved pay and allowances computed on the basis of the increased rates of pay subsequently provided by section 2 of the act of June 29, 1946, for commissioned warrant officers, subject to the new maximum limitation on pay and allowances prescribed therein."

Naval Officer Schools

The Navy this week requested applications for the following instruction:

"Applications are desired for three months' course at Army Information School, Carlisle, Pa., from officers Regular Navy, also Naval Reserve and USN(T) officers accepted for transfer but whose transfers have not actually been accomplished. First class convenes 13 Nov. 1946. Classes will convene every three months thereafter. Applications are particularly desired from officers performing collateral duties as Public Information Officers or other officers recommended for this duty by their CO. Students completing course will in general be returned to present duty station but may expect to be assigned to public information billets at some future date. It is imperative that dispatch applications be submitted immediately for class convening 13 Nov. SAKS FIFTH AVENUE

ONE OF AMERICA'S LEADING CIVIL, MILITARY AND NAVAL OUTFITTERS

AT ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

U. S. COAST GUARD

PROCUREMENT of applicants for the Coast Guard Academy examination 7-8 May 1947 is a subject which Headquarters desires to bring to the attention of all officers at this time. For various reasons, such as the trend in the mind of the public away from the military, ease of employment and high wage scale, and the fact that the presently eligible age group is liberally sprinkled with veterans who are attending college under the GI Bill, it is believed that obtaining desired eligible youths will be more difficult this year than at any previous time.

Unless an all-out effort is made to obtain likely candidates by publicity, personal contact, visits to schools, and talks to educators and the student guidance group, the Coast Guard will be faced with the serious problem of few applicants, fewer entering cadets, and still fewer graduating officers.

The service is, as a whole, very much aware of the presently existing shortage of officers. If the Academy, the main source of supply of the qualified officer, fails to graduate a sufficient quantity each year due to insufficient numbers of cadets entering each year, this shortage will continue to exist. The result is a net overall decrease in Service efficiency due to a personnel shortage, similar to the existing situation.

At Headquarters, officers are being made available to the Training and Procurement Division from other activities, as they can be spared, for the purpose of traveling in the field and making personal appearances at educational institutions.

Individual officers are urged by Headquarters to participate actively in this program as best they can by making personal contact with what are considered likely candidates.

Approximately 30 officers are now assigned duty afloat, undergoing engineering training. At the outbreak of the war, previously established requirements for the qualification of student engineers for further assignment to engineering duty were waived, and the responsibility for certification of these officers was given to commanding officers.

A wide divergence of requisite qualifications now exists, making it desirable to re-establish uniform standards. The Office of Engineering is considering this subject and will soon prescribe an effective course of study and outline general instructions for officers undergoing engineering training. In the meantime, the responsibility remains with engineering officers and the commanding officers to plan and execute a satisfactory program for qualifying these officers for engineering duty.

A Personnel Memorandum soon to be disseminated to the field concerns preparation of officer fitness reports, calling attention to the apparent inattention of reporting officers in their responsibilities for submitting clear and concise reports, and the fact that fitness reports received to date are generally of no value to examining personnel boards. The importance of fitness reports is particularly stressed at this time in view of the selection boards to be convened in the near future for consideration of reappointing certain personnel.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1946

"To play our part in the prevention of new conflicts and in bringing about a sound settlement of the problems growing out of the war, we must be alert and we must be strong. It is essential that adequate armed forces be maintained."—ADMIRAL THOMAS Q. KINKAID.

OUR PRIORITY LIST

- Maintenance in accordance with professional studies of our national needs and international commitments, of Regular Establishments organized and trained to utilize and employ materials of war developed by continuing scientific research, and backed by industry and labor kept intimately familiar with the manufacture of such materials.
- Reconstruction of National Guard and Reserve components federally aided and encouraged to maximum efficiency, and effectively coordinated with the Regular Services, and universal military training.
- Increase in active and retired pay and allowances to meet rising costs so as to enable maintenance of American standards of living, and protection of such pay from reduction through income taxes.
- Institution of orderly promotion systems in the Regular Establishments with recognition of war service and war ranks to prevent stagnation, and to insure the maintenance of high professional standards.
- Continuance and expansion of service schools, including the Army and Navy Staff College, attendance of which shall be open to National Guard and Reserve officers.
- Suitable rank and retirement benefits for former enlisted personnel and warrant officers who served as command officers during the war.
- Grant of the same rights and benefits to those who elect to remain in the Services as will be enjoyed by the discharged veterans.
- Upward revision of pension scales to insure Service widows and dependents a living income.
- Compensation for Service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.
- Maintenance of stock piles of strategic materials.

THE War and Navy Departments are to be congratulated on their actions last week in making public respectively, the names of the members of the Army screening board which is to participate in the selection out of officers considered unfit for the Service, and the members of the various Naval boards which will pick officers for temporary promotion to the grade of rear admiral. During the war the Army kept confidential the names of the members of the various personnel boards which passed on the granting of commissions, promotions and demotions, the removal of officers under Public Law 190, etc. The standing of these Boards may be attributed in large part to the fact that, in spite of the secrecy, it became generally known early that the most important of them were headed by the late General Malin Craig—an officer in whom Congress as well as the Service had implicit faith and confidence. During the war, too, the Navy did not release for publication the names of officers charged with the selection of others for promotion. Before the war the Navy did make such memberships public, but not until a few days before the boards met. The new public relations policies in these matters will go far toward the building of Service confidence in the administration of personnel matters, for secrecy always breeds suspicion and works against morale. The new procedure is evidence also of the determined policy of General Eisenhower and Admiral Nimitz to build permanent Service teams with the highest morale and consequently of the highest efficiency. There is not the slightest doubt but that they will be prepared to give the Congressional committees the reaction of Service officers to proposals on personnel legislation. There has been a mistaken view in some quarters that to disseminate legislative proposals prior to submission to Congress would be resented by members of the Committees. That this is not the case is evidenced by the views of many members of the Committees revealed in interviews printed in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, showing they believe that their work would be made easier and more satisfactory legislation result if Service comments on proposed legislation are secured in advance. General Eisenhower and Admiral Nimitz, with their long experience with Congress know that its members are interested in the reaction of the individuals affected by legislation and will be gratified if they can be readily and fully informed of such reaction and comment.

WITH the appointment this week by President Truman of the five members of the Atomic Energy Commission there has been a disposition to regard the new system of civilian administration as a shift in emphasis from the military to non-military applications of the new power. Such certainly was not the intent of Congress which made clear in the Act that non-military development and utilization of atomic energy must be "subject at all times to the paramount objective of assuring the common defense and security." Furthermore, Congress directed the Commission to establish a "Division of Military Application" under a Director who must be a member of the Armed Forces. To maintain constant control of the new Commission the law also provides that it must report to Congress in January and July of each year concerning its activities. A Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to be composed of nine Senators and nine Representatives will be set up in the next Congress to make continuing studies of the activities of the Commission. For some time in the future the Commission must, perchance, depend upon the Armed Forces to perform much of its work, inasmuch as the Manhattan District under the direction of Maj. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, USA, has carried out the development, research and production to date, and because Army and Navy scientists and technologists represent so large a part of the personnel at Oak Ridge and other plants. Because the Services, too, are deeply concerned in uses for atomic energy other than explosives (both the Navy and Air Forces, for example, are pressing forward in the matter of its utilization for propulsion) they might well be empowered to carry on this phase of the project for the Commission. Indeed, until such time as this Nation may become signatory to any international agreements restricting or banning the military use of this great force which we brought into being, the Commission would do well to aid in every way it can the research and development into the uses of atomic energy for our common defense. Not to press toward this "paramount objective" would be not only an unwarranted dissipation of the billions we have put into atomic development but also endanger our security and, furthermore, a betrayal of the millions of men whose valor and sacrifice preserved the nation in World War II.

Sure-Fire Reducer

"I believe you are thinner than the last time I saw you, Mrs. Jones. Are you taking treatments or dieting?"

"Oh, no, that's because of the trouble I have with my new maid."

"Why don't you fire her?"

"I'm going to, just as soon as she worries me down to 140 pounds."

The Pulse.

Magician!

An Englishman and an American were crossing the ocean on the same boat. While chatting on deck one day, the Englishman asked about the American's occupation.

"I'm a magician," the latter replied.

"Really? What's your specialty?"

"I make things disappear. . . ."

At which moment a torpedo scored a direct hit and the two voyagers found themselves in the water clinging to a piece of wreckage. Shaking water from his eyes, the Englishman sputtered angrily:

"I suppose you think that's funny!"

Bealiner.

Spice of Life

A woman lay very ill. Having brought up a clever orphan girl, the sick woman called the orphan to her and said:

"I shall soon leave my little children motherless. They know you and love you, and after I am gone I want you and my husband to marry."

The young woman, bursting into tears, said: "We were just talking about that."

The wife recovered.

The Most Part

"So," sobbed Ilma Kropotkin Visilinevitch, "Ivan Ninesporski died in battle. Did he really whisper my name as he was dying?"

"Part of it, lady," replied the soldier, "part of it."

In Anticipation

Half a dozen soldiers rapped on the pearly gates.

"What nationality are they?"

"Americans."

"Let them in. They'll apply for a transfer in six weeks anyhow."

Sure Enough

"I shall die unless you marry me!" he declared, desperately. Still she refused him. And sure enough, he went out West and after 72 years, three months and 11 days, he became suddenly ill and died.

Ask The Journal

(This Department is maintained as a service for ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL subscribers. Please send return postage for direct reply.)

T. G. T.—Constructive service may be counted toward retirement, but not for retired pay purposes. The authority for counting service in the inactive reserve toward longevity pay is the Pay Readjustment Act of 1942 (permanent legislation). Constructive service may not be counted for purposes of pay.

F. J. B.—A civilian with sufficient Army service to entitle him to retirement must reenlist in the Army before he can apply for retirement. Under the Act of 3 Feb. 1944 a soldier previously discharged was authorized the mustering out pay (if otherwise eligible) providing he made application for it within 2 years of the effective date of that act. To have obtained this mustering out pay it would have been necessary for you to have applied for it prior to 3 Feb. 1946.

P. H.—There is no War Department regulation in effect at the present time which makes it possible for a soldier to obtain a "purchase discharge."

W. P. M.—According to the War Department a Captain in the Pharmacy Corps whose date of rank was 26 July 1940 would have been eligible for promotion to Major on 26 July 1940.

It is just a century since Robert Fulton endeavored to introduce his submarine vessel and torpedoes to the notice of the French authorities, to whom he asserted his ability to destroy forever the maritime supremacy of England. Although the success of his experiments was established, Fulton failed to obtain either from the Directory or from Bonaparte the means of applying his inventions.

Precisely what sort of a compact is to be struck (between the United States and the Empire of the Czar) whether a polite and barren entente cordiale, or a coalition offensive and defensive, the quidnuncs are not agreed. Indeed, there is some difficulty in specifying details, just as there would be in arranging a treaty between the earth and the moon, for example. (Editorial comment.)

Future Aircraft Plans

The models of future military aircraft which would be produced for the Army Air Forces in case of an emergency have already been selected, Air Materiel Command Headquarters announced 29 Oct.

This selection, the announcement said, will be the subject of constant review and revision according to changes in military plans and industrial research. A large percentage of the models selected is based on the current trend in combat aircraft toward jet propulsion.

As part of the entire air industrial preparedness plan, this particular phase of the program will allow for simplification of mobilization plans and for the preparations of plans for building aircraft best suited to any future mobilization.

Fifth Air Force Maneuvers

The largest Army Air Forces maneuvers to be staged since the end of the war have recently been completed by the Fifth Air Force under command of Maj. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe.

The five-day maneuvers began 14 Oct. and took the form of a mock attack on Japan's south coast. Operational control of the maneuvers was assigned to the Fifth's 314th Composite Wing, formerly known as the Fifth Bomber Command and now tactically referred to as the Fifth's "Air Task Force." The task force conducted the maneuvers under the command of Brig. Gen. David W. Hutchinson, who was assisted by Col. K. O. Sanborn, officer in charge of planning the air participation in the maneuvers.

In the joint air-land-sea maneuver and landing took place along the shore strip lying between Chigasaki and Katase, and to the southwest and southeast of the Atsugi airport.

AAF Announces X-7 Engine

The world's most powerful reciprocating aircraft engine was unveiled 31 Oct. by the Army Air Forces at the Lycoming Division of the Aviation Corporation at Williamsport, Pa.

Designed and developed under supervision of the Air Materiel Command, the engine develops 5,000 horsepower at takeoff. It has 36 cylinders in four banks of nine each.

Developed to answer the need for powering long-range bombers and transports, the liquid-cooled engine, designated the X-7, combines high power output necessary for takeoff with low fuel consumption necessary for range. It is estimated that installation of the X-7 in Army Air Forces aircraft designed for 10,000 mile range with 10,000 pounds payload would: (1) increase the range to approximately 11,500 miles; or, (2) increase the payload range to 50,000 pounds.

AAF Aid Society Drive

The AAF Aid Society, a relief organization serving members and former members of the Army Air Forces and their dependents, will conduct its first membership drive 3-18 Nov., AAF headquarters announced 25 Oct.

The drive, wholeheartedly supported by General Carl Spaatz, AAF Commander, will be conducted at all Air Forces stations, and its goal will be to enroll all Air Forces personnel as members.

In a letter to all members of the Air Forces, General Spaatz declared: "Some of the personnel who helped make possible the success of the Army Air Forces and the dependents of those who made the supreme sacrifice sometimes need the help of those of us who are in more fortunate circumstances. I urge each of you to support the Aid Society program by becoming a member during the membership drive."

The Aid Society was incorporated in March, 1942, to collect and hold funds to be used for relief purposes after the war. It began to operate in a relief capacity on 1 March 1946. According to Maj. Gen. Howard C. Davidson, retired, Director of the Aid Society, financial assistance exceeding $185,000 was extended to more than 3,000 persons during the first six months of operation.

NATS Cargo Priorities

The Naval Air Transport Service Command inaugurated a four-class priority system on 1 Sept. applicable to passengers, cargo, and mail which are to be handled by NATS. The four classes of priorities replaced the then existing system of A, B and non-priority classifications.

The Chief of Naval Operations delegated the basic authority to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts to approve transportation and assign priorities for all types of Navy cargo.

The Bureau also designated shipping activities throughout the Naval establishment to issue air transportation priorities for cargo. The new priorities are:

"Class 1—Passengers, cargo and mail, the movement of which is required by an emergency so acute that precedence should be given over all other traffic and which should under no circumstances be delayed en route for other traffic."

"Class 2—Passengers, cargo and mail, the transportation of which by air is necessary to the accomplishment of a mission essential to the National Security or the requirements of the Army or Navy and which is of an urgent nature."

"Class 3—Passengers, cargo and mail transportation of which by air is necessary in the interest of National Security or the requirements of the Army or Navy but not of an urgent nature."

"Class 4—Passengers, cargo and mail, the movement of which is in the National interest because it will contribute directly or indirectly (1) to National Security or the requirements of the Army or Navy; (2) to the relief or rehabilitation activities affected, and (3) to the resumption of economic or other activities disrupted by the war that are necessary for the prompt re-establishment of peacetime conditions."

Cargo may also be forwarded in NATS on a "space available" basis. Such traffic will not be entitled to a priority and will be subject to being off-loaded in favor of priority traffic. All Navy shipping activities have authority to ship non-priority cargo by Naval Air Transport Service.

36th Fighter Group Reactivated

Howard Field, Canal Zone—The 36th Fighter Group, veteran of the European Theater of Operations has been reactivated in the Panama Canal Zone, under the direction of Col. Russ Spicer.

The Group is divided into three squadrons, the 22nd and 23rd Fighter Squadrons at Howard Field, and the 53rd Fighter Squadron at France Field.

Since its origination at Langley Field, Va., in February 1940, the group has made a commendable combat record, having served in the anti-submarine patrol, and in England, France, and Germany.

With the beginning of the 6th Fighter Wing, of the Caribbean Air Command, the 36th Fighter Group has made a new start, changing the 32nd Fighter Squadron of Howard Field to the 23rd, under the command of Lt. Col. H. P. K. Walmsley, and the 43rd Fighter Squadron of France Field, to the 53rd, commanded by Major Bruce H. Hinton. The 22nd Fighter Squadron is commanded by Lt. Col. Benjamin S. Preston.

ATC "Sonnie" Project

With negotiations under way to sell the Swedish government 50 surplus P-51 "Mustang" fighter planes, the cooperation of Sweden with the Air Transport Command is now revealed.

After State Department negotiations with the neutral Swedish authorities the Air Transport Command was permitted to undertake one of the most unique operations of the war. Known as the "Sonnie" project, ATC operated a secret pseudo-civilian airline between Scotland and Stockholm from April 1944 to June 1945.

In this operation 2,000 trained Norwegian flyers and 1500 interned U.S. airmen were flown out of Sweden, past the German defenses in Norway, to safety in England. At the same time, ATC flew 67 "Carpet-bagger" missions to drop 120 tons of critical supplies to Norwegian underground forces and parachuted spies and saboteurs into German-occupied Norway.

Operating under the command of Col. Bernt Balchen, famed polar aviator, and flying modified black-painted "Liberator" bombers with civilian license numbers, the planes flew up the North Sea, sneaked across Norway in the night, and landed at Stockholm. The crews, guised as civilians, loaded the planes with interned American airmen who had sought the shelter of Sweden after their bombers were too badly damaged over Germany to return to England. Other passengers were Norwegian airmen bound for England to carry on the war. Nationals of at least five other countries were flown to England in lesser numbers. By altering their time and routes and by flying at night and in clouds, 4304 passengers were brought out of Sweden without a casualty.

Indeed, so dependent were the flights on darkness and clouds for safety that sometimes flights were cancelled during the short summer nights for lack of darkness. Despite the fact that the Luftwaffe had fighters based in Norway, no transport was ever intercepted.

Another secret project carried out with Swedish cooperation was the "When and Where" project. C-47 transports based in Tulea, Sweden were used to fly material and passengers to the Norwegian underground. Landing strips were cleared on the ice-covered rivers to allow the Air Transport Command to land and pick up Norwegians trained in underground activities. When not possible to land, supplies were dropped by parachute.

Other supplies of weapons, food, ammunition, radios, and sabotage equipment were flown from Scotland and para-dropped to the Norwegians in the "Ball" project during the summer of 1944. In a lighter vein, latest issues of American magazines were dropped to be circulated in Norwegian libraries much to the chagrin of the enemy.

Airlines Use of Navy Radar

Navy radar equipment is now being used by commercial aircraft under an experimental contract between the American Airlines and the Navy Department.

Under the contract the Navy in July of this year leased to the Airlines enough equipment to outfit two planes for extensive experimental purposes.

Under the contract, the American Airlines will not only make information on use of the radar available to the Navy, but also to other airlines and governmental agencies. Early experiments will be conducted on cargo carriers.

Double Compensation

The Comptroller General has ruled that a retired officer employed in a Navy officers' mess holds a civilian position under the United States Government, and is therefore amendable to the law that limits to $3000 the combined pay possible for a retired officer employed in a civilian position under the Government.

It takes many people and many things to keep on giving you the best telephone service in the world.

It takes a lot of money — investors' money — to provide the facilities.

There's an investment of $240 behind your telephone and every one of the 25,000,000 telephones in the Bell System.

It takes good management and good employees to operate these facilities. There are about 600,000 Bell System employees — many in management and supervisory positions.

It takes faith in the future. We're busy right now on a $2,000,000,000 building and expansion program — to catch up with the Nation's needs and give you more and better service than ever before.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—It is significant that at the meeting of the United Nations Assembly, all the delegates save those representing the Soviet Union and the countries it controls, burst into loud applause when Senator Austin, chief of the American delegation, stated that prior to World War II the United States had disarmed unilaterally, and that it would not repeat that mistake. The assertion was in response to a truculent speech made by Foreign Commissar Molotov in the course of which he advocated that the General Assembly consider and declare a general reduction of armaments as necessary; that as a primary objective the manufacture and use of atomic energy for military purposes be banned; that the Security Council be asked to provide for the practical achievement of these two aims, and that all Governments assist the Council in their realization. While this program appealed to all the delegates, the majority felt it would be futile in the absence of a system of international inspection to assure the observance of an armament reduction pledge. It was to correct this omission that Senator Austin proclaimed America's policy. More than this, however, the fact that the mass of the delegates enthusiastically approved his announcement that the United States would remain strong unless all cut their forces, which is the plain inference from his remarks, can be accepted as an indication that the peace of the world depends upon a powerful America. In other words, if there is to be a reduction of armaments, the United States will require that it be general in character and scope and subject to international inspection as was advocated by Mr. Litinov, the Russian delegate to the Geneva Disarmament Conference in 1927. Meanwhile to the satisfaction of the Nations of similar viewpoint to ours, we will maintain our Army, Navy and Air Forces and will protect our secret of the Atomic Bomb, the power of which Generalissimo Stalin had minimized, and further observed that its monopolistic possession could not last long and that anyhow its use would be prohibited.

Proposals for disarmament or reduction in armaments were first suggested in our time by Czar Nicholas, who in 1900 dwelt upon the importance of such a means for preserving peace. At that start of the new century, the United States as a result of the defeat of Spain, had emerged as a world power; Russia with limited resources save in man power was drifting into war with Japan as a result of her control of Manchuria through the acquisition of Port Arthur as a military base and the commercial port of Dairen, and her designs upon Korea; and Britain was paramount upon the seas. The Czar's proposal received lip service, and realizing that nothing would come of the negotiations, President Theodore Roosevelt pressed the construction of a strong Navy. In 1927, Russia was weak, and appreciating the fact the Russian Government welcomed the idea of disarmament and proposed that it be general. We all know the lack of results of the negotiations in the Swiss City, and as we look back we find the United States was the single State which really weakened its power to the point where we were disregarded, especially by Hitler. It is now appreciated that had our country been strong, which was the earnest advice of our Army and Navy authorities, Hitler and other ambitious aggressors would have hesitated to embark upon policies that led to World War II.

It is clear from the remarks made in the Assembly meeting as well as other developments that the several nations will continue to regard disarmament or the reduction of armaments from the viewpoint of their own special interests. Indications of this are numerous. Russia's obvious determination to maintain occupation of the European and Chinese territories she controls, and the latest her demand for reports on the number of Allied troops on foreign soil "outside of former enemy territory." Going much further, Senator Austin insisted that the UN should obtain reports on "all mobilized arm forces" whether at home or abroad. Former Premier Churchill, doubtless at the instance of the Attlee government, charged on 23 October, that Russia had 200 divisions, which he estimated to number from 2.5 to 3 million men, stationed in Europe outside of the USSR. This estimate Stalin declared was unfounded, that there were only 60 divisions, soon to be reduced to 40 divisions, the majority of which are not at full strength, in Germany, Austria, Hungary, Bulgaria and Poland. The Generalissimo, however, failed to mention the matter of home strength nor what will happen to the 20 divisions when they return. Nor did he identify the size of the average post-war Russian division, although it is rumored to range from 8,000 to 17,000. In any event, that figure of 60 divisions, plus corps and army troops, plus service troops, could produce a total not far from the 1,500,000 total which observers have conjectured to be the likely number of Russian soldiers in the west. Conservative guesses (they are little more) have put the total number under arms in the present Soviet army at 3,000,000, plus 1,500,000 in other armed services; this would make a 4,500,000 total, against a reputed 17,000,000 during the war, the reduction being chiefly in ground forces.

Our own reduction from the wartime 8,300,000 in the U. S. Army has already been to 1,300,000 men, with 1,070,000 as the July (1947) objective. This is not a guess; the War Department announces our numbers officially. It does not announce officially the number of our divisions, but that assuredly is not because they are so numerous as to alarm anyone. On the basis of numbers of men, our reduction from the wartime peak is materially sharper than Russia's, percentagewise; in numbers of divisions (and effectiveness) our reduction is still more marked. As to Great Britain, the unofficial estimate of today's troops runs around 1,500,000; their overseas responsibilities are demonstrably large.

It is difficult to make comparisons in reductions when our own nation is the only one which methodically announces not only the numbers of its troops but their present locations by theater, as General Eisenhower did in complete candor a week ago. Yet on any basis of comparison it would seem that, without waiting for General Assembly advices, the United States has reduced armaments at considerably faster pace than other great nations. There is no reason to oppose Mr. Molotov's basic proposals in principle; the question is over agreement on the means of making those admirable principles work, and in that effort bad tempers help little. Probably Russia will combine the strength of Great Britain and the United States in her calculations, especially as plans are underway to make the standard of weapons the same for both countries and we are continuing to maintain the Combined Chiefs of Staff.

The Bulgarian elections surprised nobody. Watchful Russian garrisons seemed to make a Communist victory at the polls a good bet, and it was a work of supererogation for the Bulgar communist chief to warn voters against supporting the opposition, with an ominous reminder of what happened lately to Mihailovich in Yugoslavia. Even so, the so-called opposition was allowed a one-in-four representation, which superficially supports the thesis that the Bulgars are hot for democracy and manifestly tolerant of minorities. The only result of interest is that Romania, where "elections" are to be held on 19 Nov. now has been warned by our State Department that unless the coming election campaign has more aspects of fairness and freedom than are presently visible, the new government will not be recognized.

There is satisfaction over our agreement with Peru, completed this week, for turning over to that country the Talara air base in northern Peru, constructed as an important part of Panama's outlying defenses, and as a regular station on the north-south flying route. All the permanent features of the base go with the field, in accordance with the original agreement; certain non-integral installations Peru will pay for, to the extent of $91,000. Presumably the base will continue to be regarded as a unit of Pan-America's hemispheric defense system, but its sovereignty is hereafter wholly Peruvian. Our navy mission continues its presence in Chile, and our air mission as well, the only change in the latter situation being the replacement of the marine aviators by an Army Air Force detachment, as negotiated last month. Both American groups are unmistakably welcome in Peru, and, like our other missions in South America, genuine aids to good relations.

The Army Air Forces' project for an early round-the-world flight by a group of B-29 bombers has been deferred. It is stated categorically that the War Department's own request for deferment was not "encouraged" by an embarrassed State Department already knee-deep in world-peace complications, although that was the explanation almost universally offered at the outset. On the contrary, the Air Forces' spokesmen says that the deferment was sought voluntarily, and chiefly because study of the project revealed more logistic problems than at first surmised. This is entirely reasonable. There was not any special problem about sending one B-29 on such a long but well-spaced voyage—the Pacusan Dreamboat made almost a half-circuit in a single hop. But it is a wholly different thing to prepare a series of landings for 24 such planes, in orderly flights of 3, with a certainty that not one of them will encounter delay through failure of materiel, error of personnel or mischance of weather at any point along the route. That was the problem, and if the Air Forces' sober second-thought produced serious doubts which had previously been absent or ignored, deferment was wise. In that case, however, there is reason to ask why thorough study of the project's problems, which ultimately called for deferment, was not made before Assistant Secretary for Air Symington's 8 Oct. announcement, rather than weeks afterward.

Thanks of Congress: Investigation has revealed that with the voting of the thanks of the 79th Congress to General of the Army Marshall and Fleet Admiral King, and to all the members of the armed forces under their command, the total number recorded has been 32.

In the majority of instances, Congress included in its thanks the subordinate officers and enlisted men as well as the senior officer whom is specifically named. This was the case when it extended its thanks to General Marshall, Admiral King, and all the officers and men who served under them.

The first Congressional "thanks" were expressed to a Lt. Sterret, officers and crew of the U. S. Schooner Enterprise, in 1892. Through the years similar thanks were voted to the following naval personnel: Capt. Thomas MacDonough, 1814; Capt. John Rodgers, 1863; "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt, 1864; Capt. John A. Winslow, 1864; Lt. W. B. Cushing, 1864; Rear Adm. David Porter, 1865; Vice Adm. David G. Farragut, 1866; Commodore (afterward Admiral) George Dewey, 1898; Civil Engineer Robert E. Peary (afterward Admiral) 1911; Comdr. H. H. Rousseau, 1915, Comdr. Albert C. Read, 1928; Fleet Adm. Ernest J. King (together with all members of the Naval Services) 1946.

Army personnel have been voted thanks as follows: 1815, Maj. Gen. Andrew Jackson; 1863, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant; 1864; Maj. Gens. Nathaniel P. Banks, Ambrose E. Burnside, Joseph Hooker, George C. Meade, O. O. Howard; 1864, Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman, Lt. Col. Joseph Bailey; 1865, Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman, Maj. Gen. Alfred H. Terry, Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan; 1866, Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Hancock. In 1915 Congress voted its thanks to the following for services connected with the construction of the Panama Canal: Col. George W. Goethals, Brig. Gen. William C. Gorgas, Col. H. F. Hodges, Lt. Col. William L. Libert. In 1919, Congress voted its thanks to General of the Armies John J. Pershing, and in 1946 to General of the Army George C. Marshall and all members of the Military Forces.

"For distinguished services as mediators "between the United States and Mexico, Congress voted its thanks in 1915 to Senors Domicio da Gama, Romulo S. Naon, and Eduardo Suarez.

Similar thanks were voted to the following non-service personnel: 1864, Commodore Cadwalader Ringgold; 1910, to the Italian Government for gifts of art; 1914, to the Captain, officers and crew of the Red Star liner Kroonland; 1929, to the officers and crew of the USS AMERICA.

Unique in the history of the United States was the voting of thanks on 3 March 1864 "to the Volunteer Soldiers who have reenlisted in the Army."

In three cases the thanks were expressed to several individuals by name in one resolution.

According to the records, only one individual, Maj. Gen. William T. Sherman, has received the thanks of Congress twice.

However, in the history of the United States innumerable medals have been voted to specific individuals.

Adjutant General's Department—The Adjutant General's School at Fort Oglethorpe is being moved to Carlisle Barracks, Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, The Adjutant General, announced today. The first class, originally scheduled to open 7 Nov. at Oglethorpe will begin on 15 Nov. at the school's new location, General Witsell said.

General Witsell, Col. Kenneth B. Bush, Assistant The Adjutant General for Administrative Services, and Col. Eustace M. Peixotto, Assistant The Adjutant General for Management, will leave Monday for St. Louis where they will meet with Col. Charles D. Carle in connection with operation of the Records Administration Center, AGO. The group will return to Washington next Friday.

Officers of the Adjutant General's Department who retired on 31 Oct. include Maj. Gen. William C. Rose, Maj. Gen. Clarence A. Danielson, Brig. Gen. Thomas J. Davis, and Cols. Livingston Watrous and Robert E. Cummings.

Lt. Col. Paul A. Bucha of Administrative Services, AGO, left last week for 10 days leave preparatory to entering the AG School.

Col. Daniel Poteet (FA) AGD, began his retirement leave today. He has been assigned to the Personnel Bureau, AGO, and will retire on 31 Dec.

Col. Vernon W. Rice, chief of the Army Publications Service, is expected to leave Washington tomorrow for St. Louis, Ogden, San Antonio and San Francisco where he will inspect activities of AG Depots.

Lt. Col. James N. Shigley, chief of the Translation Branch, AGO, located in New York City, has been ordered to the AG School for the 1946-47 term. He has been replaced by Capt. Rosalie N. McClary, WAC, a fluent linguist who speaks seven languages.

Bureau of Supplies and Accounts—A Navy Material Logistics Handbook is now being prepared for Supply Corps officers and administrative units engaged in planning logistic support incident to the successful prosecution of naval warfare.

It is the result of a series of research studies begun in 1945 by the Logistics Research Sections of the Bureau and the Naval Operational Training Center, Bayonne, N. J.

Chapter headings in the handbook are: Naval Logistics Organization, Logistics Glossary, Logistics Reference Data, A Standard Logistics Annex, Civil Logistics, A Navy Staff and Theoretical Logistics.

As the chapters are completed advance copies will be sent to logistics sections of the naval establishment for review and comment. In this manner it is felt that the substance can be subjected to critical appraisal by its users before the first edition is printed.

To date there have been distributed advance copies of the chapters on "Logistics Glossary" and "Logistics Reference Data." It is expected that addressees will forward constructive criticism and comment to the Supply Officer-in-Command, Navy Supply Corps School (Logistics Research Department), Bayonne, N. J.

After necessary revisions have been made and after approval by the Chief of Naval Operations, the handbook will be printed in format similar to the new Bureau Manual.

Quartermaster Corps—To give instructors at Army Ground Forces and Army Air Forces Food Service Schools a wider knowledge to pass on to cooks in Army messes, Quartermaster Corps officers will study methods of food preparation and the uses of food equipment and facilities at some of the nation's leading hotels and restaurants. The Quartermaster General announced this week. Upon completion of their studies, a number of these officers will join the staff of instructors at the Quartermaster School, Camp Lee, Va. Some will be assigned as food advisors in higher echelons. AGF and AAF officers, after graduation from the Quartermaster School, will be assigned to posts and camps throughout the country to serve as instructors to cooks.

The new five-in-one ration developed by the Quartermaster Corps has been adopted by the Army. Meat items include beef and gravy, bacon, frankfurters, pork sausage links, hamburgers, pork and gravy, roast beef, spaghetti and meat balls, ham and eggs, salmon or tuna, and ham and sweet potatoes. There were no fruits in former rations. The new one has fruit cocktail, peaches, apricots, and sliced pineapple.

Lt.-Col. Joseph F. Watt, QMC, of Arlington, New Jersey, has been assigned as Executive Officer of the Boston Quartermaster Depot, according to an announcement by Col. Bernard J. Finan, Commanding Officer of the Depot.

Bureau of Naval Personnel—A special board is now convened in the Bureau for the purpose of reviewing tentative drafts of new chapters of the Bureau of Naval Personnel Manual, preparatory to publishing a new BuPers Manual. The work is regarded more as "re-writing" than a "revision."

Because no funds were appropriated for this purpose, the new Manual cannot be printed until the next fiscal year, beginning in July 1947, when, it is hoped, an allotment will be made available in the appropriations bill for that year. Similarly, the new edition of U. S. Navy Regulations, if ready for publication, will not be printed until next July for the same reason. The Navy Regulations Board first met in March.

The task of rewriting each chapter of the Manual was assigned some time ago to certain groups within the Navy. Among the more extensive changes expected are the incorporation of requirements for the new enlisted rating structure to be adopted by the Navy, a more complete statement of Naval Reserve regulations in Chapter H, and a re-statement of reports required by the Bureau.

The new chapters along with the old are being thoroughly studied in the light of their applicability in the post-war naval organization.

The Infantry School—An important contribution to military literature was made last week when the Training Literature and Visual Aids Section of The Infantry School, in conjunction with the Army Field Printing Plant, completed the compilation of their six volume "Catalogue of Training Aids" containing photographs of charts, forms and working models currently used by instructors of the School as visual aids in teaching the complex science of modern ground warfare.

Fifteen sets of the catalogues have been forwarded to Army Ground Forces to be used as reference works, one set has been sent to Post Headquarters, one set has gone to the File Section of the School and the remaining set has been broken down and each section of the School has received the volume which deals with its particular work. Similar books on training aids are being prepared by other military schools.

Eighteen sets of catalogues of six volumes each were compiled, edited and printed in a thirty-nine day period. Each volume of the sets weighs twenty-five pounds and each set of catalogues contains nearly two thousand illustrations.

The Army Field Printing Plant did the photographic work for the training catalogue, delivering 36,046 four by five photographs to TL&VA printed from 1,797 negatives.

In order to accomplish the job of compiling the huge tomes on schedule with a limited staff (three officers and fifteen enlisted workers), TL&VA, headed by Col. C. E. Beauchamp, had to set up mass production assembly line methods and work many hours overtime.

U. S. Naval Reserve—Facilities for undersea submarine training of 200 members of the Organized or Volunteer Naval Reserve have been made available at the Submarine Base, New London, Conn. These Reserves will be chosen from the First, Third, Fourth, and Fifth Naval Districts and from the Potomac River Naval Command.

Training periods will be of two weeks duration with a maximum of 40 applicants undergoing training at any one time.

While Reservists having qualified in submarines have top priority in this program, the quota also will include those having had previous service in submarines but who failed to qualify, and those who are interested in submarine training but who have had no previous undersea warfare service.

During World War II, eleven Reserve officers were in command of combat submarines and 22 in command of training submarines.

Safe Driving Program—In expanding its Safe Driving Program, the War Department Motor Center will award an Excellence Plaque to each driver who meets certain safety standards for a three-month period, Brig. Gen. Claude B. Ferenbaugh, commanding general of the Military District of Washington, has announced. Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, Personal Physician to the President, recently observed one of the plaques attached to a War Department vehicle and called it to the attention of President Truman.

"The President is highly enthusiastic about this means of recognizing our soldiers' skill in driving and traffic safety," General Graham said.

Col. Raymond Dailey, commander of the Motor Center, who initiated the award, says that it has created a keen competitive attitude among his drivers and contributes greatly to their morale. Colonel Dailey, a Regular Army Cavalry officer, has many devices to improve his drivers. For instance, when a man violates a traffic rule he is ordered to write and rewrite for a specified number of times the traffic rule violated.

Marine Corps—An athletic program has been established in the Marine Corps as a form of recreation which will promote spirit within units, attain physical conditioning of participants, and develop leadership and confidence.

Athletic programs will be planned in sports that facilities permit, and will include all individuals. Leagues and tournaments are to be organized for each echelon of command; that is, platoons, companies, and battalions or organizations of similar strength will compete in leagues to determine regimental, division, or post champions.

Competition in this intramural program will be encouraged by the award of prizes and the publicizing of teams and champions.

Annual tournaments will be held, when feasible, consisting of play-offs to determine regional or national champions. When practicable, the Marine Corps will sponsor an all-Marine team to represent the Marine Corps in participating in leagues and tournaments with the other services and civilian teams.

Signal Corps—Col. Victor A. Finance Department—Maj. Gen. William H. Kasten, Chief of Finance, U. S. Army, announced last week that plans are being made for a concerted Savings Bond drive throughout the Army in order to achieve fuller participation by all military and civilian personnel of the Army in the purchase of Savings Bonds.

Col. Robert H. Bradshaw, Commanding Officer, Office of Dependency Benefits, Office of the Chief of Finance, Newark, N. J., visited Washington last week to confer with Maj. Gen. Wm. H. Kasten, Chief of Finance, U. S. Army, concerning ODB matters. The ODB is in the process of being moved from Newark, N. J., to the Army Finance Center at St. Louis, Mo. The first move was made recently when the government Insurance Allotment Division of the ODB was moved to St. Louis. Other ODB components will follow and by 20 Feb. 1947, it is expected to locate the entire ODB in St. Louis. Other OCF activities moved to the Army Finance Center in recent months were the Army Finance School and the Finance Training Center.

The Cavalry School—Announcement of the location of the Ground General School at Fort Riley, Kans., increased the tempo and the number of conferences dealing with problems arising from the reorganization.

Both The Cavalry School and the Intelligence School will be affected. The Cavalry School plant will be absorbed by the Ground General School. Those functions of The Cavalry School which pertain to fields other than animals will be transferred to The Armored School at Fort Knox, Kentucky. Those courses that still will be taught by the Department of Horsemanship are: Advanced Horsemanship Course, Intermediate Horsemanship Course, Horseshoers-Packers Course and Saddlers-Packers Course. The Intelligence School activities will be under the Ground General School.

The new school will offer three different courses. One will be a seventeen week basic course for newly commissioned West Point graduates and newly integrated second lieutenants. Another will be a twenty-four week officer candidate school for enlisted men seeking commissions. The third will be a nineteen week intelligence course for officers, to be offered twice yearly. This course will take over the instruction formerly offered by the Intelligence School.

Plans and preparations are being made to fit the instructional and command framework of The Cavalry School to the vastly greater requirements of the Ground General School.

Medical Department—Real "shell shock"—a relatively rare condition—has been found by Army medical officers. It is a hitherto undescribed syndrome, or complex of systems, a mental and physical condition due entirely to the effect of blast upon tissues of the brain. The existence of a limited number of such cases is established by an intensive study reported in the October issue of the Medical Corps Bulletin. Thirty-four cases were studied in which no other cause for the pathological condition could be found. The men were studied from 50 days to a year after being subjected to the blast waves. Whether there is definite alteration in the brain has been impossible to determine, the report stated. The indications are, however, that this is true. Even so, the study explains, it need not cause any permanent mental or nervous disability and on the whole the prognosis for shell shock is good.

A plastic substance, used by American dentists only as a base for dentures and for crowns and inlays, was successfully utilized by Germans as a permanent filling for caries during the war, Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, The Surgeon General, reported this week. A study made by an officer of the Surgeon General's office of German dental practices since the start of the war found little else of value to the dental profession in the United States. Most of the progress made in the dental field was due to the necessity of finding substitutes for unobtainable substances rather than developing superior products.

The Military Order of the Carabao had its origin in the Philippine Islands at Manila in 1900 for the purpose of fostering a high standard of military and social duty and to perpetuate the memories and associations of military service in the Philippines.

The Order hopes to secure a large membership from those who participated in the recent liberation of the Philippines. By securing these younger men as members of the Order it is expected to prolong the life of the Order for a great many years to come.

The Annual "Wallow" of the Order will be held in Washington on Saturday 8 Feb. 1947. These annual gatherings hold great interest for the members, the evening being enlivened by skits characteristic of current events within the armed services, and by songs written by members reviving the memories of their service in the Philippines.

Sports Front

It would take a circus press agent, with his traditional mastery of superlatives, to compose a proper advance billing for the Army-Notre Dame game on 9 November. With Texas having conveniently lost to Rice, thus eliminating the most serious threat to the respective claims of the Cadets and the Irish to the top rung of the football ladder, this will be the climactic game of the season.

Should Notre Dame win (and it's talk like this that gives Frank Leahy the creeps), the South Benders should waltz to the mythical national title, thereby adding another million or so to its vast horde of subway alumni.

If Army takes it, they still have Penn and Navy to worry about. Penn represents a major stumbling block, by the way. Their 32-19 win over Navy was one of the most deceptive scores of the season. Scoring at will, the Quakers racked up their five touchdowns in the first half, while the Midshipmen were scoring one. The first stringers were conspicuous by their absence in the last two quarters, and Navy pushed over two more scores against reserves. The tip-off was that, so far as we could see from the press box, Minisi wasn't even in uniform in the last half.

In the brawl at Yankee Stadium on the 9th, there are two chief considerations: strength, and style of football.

Most observers agree that West Point has the best starting eleven in college ball. Their reserve strength is questionable at best. Notre Dame, however, has second, third, fourth, and even fifth teams nearly as strong as its first. If Army's starters can go the route without losing any key men, their chances of success are heightened.

Both teams run out of a T, but there resemblance ends. Long runs and passes play an important part in Army's offense, while the Irish specialize in getting the ball and moving slowly but surely down the field, seldom being stopped till they hit pay dirt.

We like Army's chances, although we are forced to confess to a modicum of prejudice. One small item, however, may well upset the applecart—the weather.

A sloppy field should be no end of help to Notre Dame; their superior manpower and their straight forward, power football will stand them in good stead if the elements are unfavorable. Army, on the other hand, may find that its passing, tricky ball-handling, and breakaway runners are of little avail in the mud.

And if you can't get there, what with one thing and another, give a listen to one of the network broadcasts.

Division Choice Offered

A plan under which three-year volunteers, for the first time, may now enlist directly into any one of six divisions engaged in occupation duties in Japan and Korea was announced 31 Oct. by the War Department.

Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, The Adjutant General, said there were two reasons for this move: 1. to build up the strength of these units which have been cut by demobilization; and 2. to increase the number of volunteers in the Pacific area.

The divisions, all of which achieved brilliant records during the Pacific fighting, are: 1st Cavalry, 11th Airborne, 6th, 7th, 24th and 25th Infantry Divisions. "The War Department," General Witsell explained, "means that young man interested in Pacific service can walk into any of the Army's 1,400 recruiting stations and for the first time not only pick the country where he wishes to be stationed, but also the outfit in which he wishes to serve."

General Witsell said the offer was limited to three-year volunteers, since men who enlist for any shorter period are not given choice of service.

CAMP HOOD, TEX.

28 Oct. 1946

Formation of the 2d Armored Division Association was announced this week by Capt. George M. Warren, Acting G-1 of the Division, who is handling the drive for members. The Association, which will function as a social, informative and historical agency, will have its temporary home at Camp Hood, Tex.

At the present time, pending the adoption of a constitution and by-laws, a promotion committee, whose duties are to handle anything pertaining to the Association, has been appointed.

Companies A and B of the 41st Armored Infantry Battalion, a part of the 2d Armored Division, recently experienced something different from their predecessors in armored infantry basic training. Under a six-day program instructed by Maj. Morris Anderson, two other officers, and ten enlisted men from Fort Benning's Airborne School, these companies went through a course in Air Transportability. Each company trained for three days.

There is to be built in South Camp Hood an air strip. The strip is to be between 7,000 and 8,000 feet long and paved. This strip will be capable of taking care of large cargo planes and bombers. The estimated cost is $1,500,000.

Its purpose is to make available airborne training for the Second Armored Division, and will be in keeping with the policy of giving first-class facilities to permanent camps.

As the patient load increases the staff will necessarily be augmented; and it is expected that under a full, peace-time patient load there will be approximately 75 officers, 100 nurses, 300 hospital corpsmen, and a corresponding increase in the civilian force. Included in the staff of medical officers there will be, besides the specialists mentioned above, a representative of every known specialty.

In the basement of the main hospital structure there is a storeroom that will hold six to eight carloads of supplies; a linen room that will hold two carloads of linen; a refrigerator where as much as four carloads of frozen meats or foods can be stored. Also in the basement there are two complete occupational therapy departments.

On the first floor, besides the necessary administrative offices, there is a Mess Hall equipped with a sound system provided by the Rotary Club of Houston. This mess hall will seat 900; and the cafeteria system, consisting of three distinct serving counters, can serve 3,000 people within one hour. In the rear of the mess hall is a galley, or kitchen, which includes a bake shop, three sculleries, three large rotary ovens, a complete butcher shop, a diet kitchen, several storage refrigerators including garbage storage, vegetable storage, ice cream, frozen food, dairy products and meat storage. There is also an ice-making machine that makes 5,000 pounds of ice a day.

On the second floor there are two libraries, one a professional and the other a lending library; a four-place telephone exchange; a Dental Clinic; a disbursing office; barber shop; two out-patient clinics; office space for the Red Cross activities and for two chaplains; a large game room; a Ship's Service store, soda fountain, and quick-order restaurant. In the extreme rear there is a beautiful theater that seats 800.

On the third floor there is a complete laboratory set-up in the front half and a physio and heliotherapy department in the rear.

The fourth floor is occupied by a very large and modern X-Ray department where all types of X-Ray work can be done including deep therapy treatment for malignant diseases, and superficial therapy for the treatment of skin diseases. In the rear of this floor there is an electrocardiographic section where electric tracings are taken of the heart action as an aid to diagnosing of heart diseases; a metabolic section that aids in diagnosing diseases caused by improper functioning of the glands of the body; also an electroencephalographic department where the electric currents that are set up in the brain are registered on very accurate and intricate recording machines to aid in the diagnosing of tumors of the brain, causes of epilepsy, and other mental diseases.

The fifth floor is given over to surgery where all operations are performed. There are four large operating rooms with all the accessory rooms; an anaesthesia room; a bronchoscopic operating room; and a biopsy examining room.

The sixth and seventh floor are private rooms for the treatment of patients. Above this is a penthouse where the necessary airconditioning and elevator equipment is stored. There is also a room in this penthouse for a master radio. This radio will be used to pick up various programs throughout the country and relay them to headphones which will be supplied to each patient throughout the medical and surgical wards. In addition there will be a large record player where music can be played and piped through these headphones to all patients throughout the hospital.

Leading off the first three floors of the main building are corridors connecting the main and permanent ward buildings. Each ward building consists of two wards on each floor, making twelve permanent wards altogether. These wards are prepared for treating the different types of medical and surgical diseases; there is a separate ward for acute and chronic medical diseases; one for skin diseases; one for urological diseases; another for eye, ear, nose, and throat diseases; two for mental and nervous diseases. In the other building there is an acute and clean surgical ward; an infected surgical ward; an orthopedic ward; and two wards for the treatment of infectious and contagious diseases including tuberculosis.

There are fourteen so-called temporary wards but in every respect they are as comfortable and probably as permanent as the previously described wards. These wards are all connected with continuous corridor to the first floor of the main hospital. They are all one-story structures, eight located on the east side of the hospital and six on the west side. Included in this number is a ward of private rooms, two wards for the treatment of infectious and contagious diseases, two wards for the treatment of mental and nervous diseases. The remaining wards will be used for medical and surgical cases as needed.

In planning and constructing this hospital every thought was given to the comfort and recreation of the patient. Besides the swimming pool, theater, which contains a Hammond organ and grand piano, Ship's Service Store, game room, and Ship's Library, each ward has a large, airy solarium outfitted with comfortable furniture including card tables where the patients are to do their smoking, reading, and card playing. In addition, in the two permanent ward buildings there is another large solarium between each ward that is provided and outfitted as a place for patients to entertain their guests.

There is a baseball diamond as well as a softball diamond and eight tennis courts. A greenhouse is provided to furnish fresh cut flowers to each ward every day. Further detailed description of the general layout and expected expenditures will help to impress one with the massiveness of the hospital project. Within its 118 acres there are three miles of paved roads and sidewalks, 30,000 feet of storm drains, 23,000 feet of water mains, 80 street lights, 20,000 feet of steam pipes. The telephone system consists of a main switchboard with its seven trunk lines and two hundred hospital telephones, and fifty pay phone stations that are operated by the telephone company.

It is expected that the hospital personnel will consume the following amounts of food within a month: 40,000 pounds of beef, 10,000 pounds of pork, 2,800 pounds of bacon, 12,000 pounds of chicken, 1500 pounds of turkey, 4,000 quarts of ice cream, 5,000 gallons of milk, and 50,000 pounds of fruit, besides many thousands of pounds of other food products.

Finn, Cummings, and Taylor, architects of Houston, Texas, designed the hospital and it was constructed by the James Stewart Corporation of New York City and Dallas, Texas.

The main speakers of the commissioning exercise were Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; Admiral James J. Manning, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks; Admiral A. S. Merrill, Commandant of the Eighth Naval District; and Congressman Albert Thomas of Texas. Prominent visitors for the commissioning included the former Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Jesse H. Jones.

The present Commanding Officer is Clyde W. Brunson, Captain, Medical Corps, U. S. Navy; and the Executive Officer is R. B. Storch, Captain, Medical Corps, U. S. Navy.

over all mainland, Alaskan, and Aleutian operations.

The target date for this is 1 Nov. The Eastern Pacific Wing will comprise two base units, Fairfield and Great Falls, and eight operating locations. With the opening of the Northern Route to Japan in the Spring, an operating location at Adak also will become active.

In addition to the Alaskan Sector operations and the Statesman run, the Pacific Division will become responsible for connecting the Continental Division located at Spokane with Great Falls. In other words, Pacific Division will establish scheduled service between Seattle and Great Falls to link up the MAT operation of the Continental Division at Seattle with our Alaskan Division at Great Falls.

The new Eastern Pacific Wing will be under the command of Brig. Gen. Archie Old, Jr. and will have about as many base units and operating locations as the present Western Pacific Wing and almost equal geographical territory.

The former West Coast Wing was deactivated as such several months ago because it contained only the 1504th Base Unit at Fairfield and an operating location at Milne Field, Calif., and it was not deemed economical to maintain a wing headquarters at that time.

The plan to establish the Eastern Pacific Wing is another indication of the constantly changing picture in the post-war activities of the ATC and the necessity to maintain fluidity in operation and organization to meet any new situation. The Eastern Pacific Wing headquarters will eliminate the present headquarters of the Alaskan sector at Great Falls, Montana, and consolidate it with the rear echelon set-up of Division headquarters at Fairfield to reduce personnel and administrative work.

With the addition of the Alaskan sector and the trans-continental operation of "The Statesman," Pacific Division activities span almost half of the globe—from Washington to Bangkok, Siam.

enlistees are highly uneconomical from a manpower point of view.

"3. Ways and means of establishing additional incentives for a three-year enlistment are currently being explored by the War Department. Some of the current advantages of a three-year enlistment are as follows:

"a. Reenlistment leave (30 days ordinary leave advanced) plus accrued leave during the last enlistment period, not to exceed 90 days.

"b. Travel allowance on leave (this is payable only to three-year enlistees on reenlistment leave).

"c. Limited selection of theatres.

"d. Limited selection of branch.

"e. An opportunity to enlist directly into divisions in the Pacific Theatre.

"f. An opportunity to attend Army schools, which opportunity is not granted to short-term enlistees.

"4. In addition to placing emphasis on the advantage of three-year enlistments, it is considered highly important that not only quota assignments consistent with population and extent of area but also point credits for canvassers within the Armies be established. One system of credit accounting and awards follows:

Three-year enlistment—five points.

Two-year enlistment—three points.

Eighteen-month enlistment—two points.

One-year enlistment—one point.

"5. Every effort will be made and methods sought and implemented with a view to increasing substantially the number of three-year enlistments. The submission of any constructive suggestions on this subject will be welcomed.

"6. It is requested that the Military Personnel Procurement Service, AGO, be advised of the action taken and procedures adopted."

Limit National Cemetery Use

Closing of the Philadelphia National Cemetery, established 61 years ago, to all burials except those of veterans who have seen distinguished service was announced by the War Department 1 Nov.

Maj. Gen. T. B. Larkin, Quartermaster General of the Army, in ordering the closing, stated that the remaining 100 grave sites have been set aside as a distinguished service section. This is in keeping with a War Department practice to provide an area in each National Cemetery in which men who have won high honors in the Army, Navy, Marines or Coast Guard may be interred.

Dependent Backlog Increases

Approximately 7,600 dependents are now awaiting transportation overseas. A War Department survey shows that 1,000 women and children have been backlogged on priority lists since 10 Oct., when some 6,000 holding priority for shipment were on the waiting list.

Of the 7,600 awaiting movement overseas as of 28 Oct., 5,383 were scheduled for the European Theater, 475 for the Mediterranean Theater, 1,017 for the Pacific Ocean Area, 498 for Japan and Korea, and 161 for China.

Joint Munitions Board

standardized roughly 80 per cent of the items both use.

"Regarding the determination of military interest in imports and exports: It was only recently that the board was charged with this responsibility by the Secretaries of War and Navy. The board holds membership on inter-agency State Department committees concerned with foreign policy and its members have been active in steps toward conserving our national resources."

Award TR Medals

Theodore Roosevelt Medals for 1946 were conferred this week upon General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Fleet Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., and Irving Berlin at a dinner of the Roosevelt Memorial Association in observance of the 88th anniversary of Theodore Roosevelt's birthday, 27 Oct.

The medals are awarded annually for achievement in the fields of activity associated with the late President Theodore Roosevelt. Will Hays, vice president of the association, was toastmaster and presented the medals. The citations were read by Hermann Hagedorn, secretary.

The award to General MacArthur was for distinguished service in the administration of public office, as well as in the field of national defense for which it was awarded to General Eisenhower and Admirals Nimitz and Halsey. The award to Mr. Berlin was for the song writer's "distinguished public service by a private citizen."

General Eisenhower was cited as representing "America at her best." In his response he said:

"You memorialize a man who stood for all the virtues that brought this nation leadership. It is high distinction to have one's name associated with a man who lived to serve the people, not to use them. He was a realist as well as an idealist. He realized that implicit in American citizenship is the obligation to support and defend the system by which there is a democracy, as well as to enjoy it. He believed in the heart of America, in its unity. In those are the strength of America."

Admiral Halsey, introduced as the "Navy's beloved five-star fighting man," declared:

"Theodore Roosevelt gave to this country a great surge of the Americanism we all love. He knew one thing—America for Americans. He brought this country to the forefront of the nations of the world. We must keep that leadership for the sake of only one thing—peace. America must keep strong and mighty that she may keep peace."

Admiral Nimitz was introduced as "one of the great admirals of history."

"I accept this medal with humility," he said, "as a token of recognition of the two and a half million officers and men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard who served under my command in the Pacific. They carried the ball; I occasionally called the signals. If I could have one wish, it would be that Theodore Roosevelt could be here. I know he would join me in paying tribute to these gallant men and join me in saying 'Well Done'."

General MacArthur was referred to as "one of the greatest soldiers in American history, who has proved himself also a great statesman."

Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy accepted the medal in behalf of General MacArthur.

In a message read by General McCoy, General MacArthur expressed gratitude and said of the award:

"It is an honor of added significance that its bestowal falls not only upon the anniversary of Theodore Roosevelt's birth but, because of his far-sighted vision in demanding the full development of naval power as requisite to the defense of our land and free institu-

FINANCEMERCHANT MARINE*Financial Digest

A summary of general business and financial conditions in the United States, based upon statistics for September and the first half of October, prepared by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System indicates that industrial production continued with little change in the period noted. Department store sales have shown no further rise from the high level reached at the end of August, although there is usually a considerable increase at this season. Wholesale prices of livestock and meats advanced sharply after the removal of price controls in the middle of October, while prices of cotton and grains declined.

Following reestablishment of Federal price controls on livestock at the beginning of September, curtailment of marketing resulted in a sharp drop in activity at meat packing plants; this decline offset, in the total index, further small gains in output of numerous other manufactured products and minerals. After the middle of October, when controls were removed, slaughter operations showed a sharp increase.

Output of durable manufactures rose two per cent in September, reflecting chiefly further gains in activity in the machinery and transportation equipment industries. Output of minerals rose slightly in September as increased production of coal and metals more than offset the slight decline in output of crude petroleum.

Value of construction contracts awarded declined further in September. Nonresidential building awards dropped one-fifth to the lowest level since the end of the war. Employment in nonagricultural establishments advanced somewhat further in September, after allowing for seasonal changes, reflecting continued gains in industries manufacturing durable goods and in trade and service lines.

Loadings of most classes of railroad revenue freight were maintained at an exceptionally high rate in September and the early part of October. Shortages of freight cars persisted during this period, limiting to some extent the distribution of commodities.

tions, this day is also set apart for special tribute by all Americans to the invincible qualities of our Navy and the gallant officers and men who have manned it."

Mr. Berlin was introduced as "an American by choice and the compulsion of the American spirit, a patriot who shares with his countrymen his gifts, his time, his energy and his earnings, a singer whose songs warm the hearts of the hundred and forty million."

Mr. Berlin made a brief acceptance speech, then went to the piano to play and sing many of his compositions, starting with the perennial favorite, "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning." He closed with a verse of "God Bless America," at which the audience spontaneously rose and joined.

Merchant Marine

Representatives of 18 nations have concluded a week of discussions in Washington on the possibilities of establishing a world-wide inter-governmental shipping organization. The group is the United Maritime Consultative Council, an official but temporary organization.

In addition to the United Nations, the members are Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Denmark, France, Greece, India, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, South Africa, Sweden, Britain and Yugoslavia. The council's first meeting was held at Amsterdam in June.

Under discussion were the following topics:

1. Consideration of the possibility of establishing a world-wide maritime organization, for which a working committee already has submitted a plan.

2. Preparation of a council reply to an inquiry from the United Nations regarding establishment of such an organization to deal with technical problems of shipping.

3. Review of machinery already established to improve the orderly transportation of certain cargoes following termination of the United Maritime Authority.

4. A review of progress made in restoration of normal international shipping since the end of the war.

The maritime industry of the United States has given informal approval to organization of an international shipping organization. At the 20th annual convention of the American Merchant Marine Conference, sponsored by the Propeller Club of the United States in New York 16-17-18 Oct., several speakers stressed the need for such a body.

The U. S. Coast Guard was the only governmental group at the convention to conduct a panel. Capt. R. T. Merrill, USCGR, executive secretary of the U. S. Safety-at-Sea Committee, spoke on the need for an international shipping organization. He said:

"The clear realization of the importance of shipping in the economic fabric of a world endeavoring to recover from a catastrophic war, the spread of controlled economies, the greater participation of states in shipping matters, all lead to proposals for the international stabilization and direction of shipping to a greater extent than ever before."

Captain Merrill mentioned the United Nations and its Economic and Social Council within whose purview shipping problems would fall. In its endeavors to recognize "specialized (shipping) agencies," the Council was confronted with a "chart-full" of "organizations whose functions might affect international shipping"—Labour, Telecommunications, Hydrographic, Meteorological, and Aviation. He said:

"When these organizations are recommending any actions, primarily within their field but necessarily impinging upon the maritime field, they find that there is no comparable international organization in the shipping field with which they can consult. They may have the greatest possible desire to cooperate and to avoid laying undue burdens upon shipping but they find no one who can speak for international shipping as a whole. As a result of this, there have been numerous encroachments by other organizations upon the maritime field which might have been prevented had there been a comparable organization for shipping."

"It would seem, therefore, that three facts are apparent, first, that no international body in the shipping field exists; second, that there is a need for an international body of that nature and, third, that the United Nations Organization is seriously considering some method of meeting that need."

Commo. H. C. Shephard, USCGR, who served as discussion leader at the Coast Guard panel, expressed his belief that the maritime industry might "miss the boat" if it doesn't hasten to organize this world-wide profession of great seniority, on an international basis.

Capt. Joseph A. Kerrins, USCG, speaking on "Maritime Safety Laws and Regulations," declared that the maritime industry "can be of great assistance in making a study of existing regulations and by offering suggestions for their simplification and improvement."

Capt. R. L. Raney, USCGR, decried wartime waivers of safety requirements, but pointed out that with the expiration of the Second War Powers Act on 31 March 1947, the power to grant waivers will cease. The shipping industry will then be required to reinstate its pre-war safety standards.

Double Compensation Ruling

Recognizing that a blanket decision covering all types of possible double compensation cannot be made, the Comptroller General has ruled as follows in the specified cases and has invited the submission of other cases seemingly not covered by existing decisions.

The official digest of the decisions follows:

"A retired officer of the armed forces in receipt of retired pay in excess of $2,500 per annum is not precluded by the dual employment restriction of the act of July 31, 1894, as amended, from accepting temporary employment in a civilian position, regardless of whether the appointment be as consultant, expert, or otherwise; however, under the dual compensation limitation of section 212 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended, the officer must elect to receive either the retired pay or the pay for the civilian position during the period of employment if the retired pay equals or exceeds $3,000 per annum.

"A retired officer of the armed forces in receipt of retired pay of less than $3,000 per annum and also holding a temporary civilian position may not, in view of the $3,000 per annum dual compensation limitation of section 212 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended, concurrently receive retired pay and compensation from the civilian position at a combined rate in excess of $3,000 per annum.

"A retired officer of the armed forces may be given permanent civilian employment if neither the retired pay nor civilian compensation exceed $2,500 per annum so that the dual employment restriction of the act of July 31, 1894, as amended, does not apply, and if the total amount of retired pay and civilian compensation be limited to $3,000 per annum as required by the dual compensation limitation of section 212 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended.

"An officer of the armed forces who was retired for disability incurred under such conditions as to be excepted from the operation of the dual employment restriction of the act of July 31, 1894, as amended, and, also, the dual compensation limitation of section 212 of the act of June 30, 1932, as amended, is entitled while holding a civilian position to receive the salary of the civilian position and at the same time receive his full retirement pay, even though his retired pay equals or exceeds $3,000 per annum.

Pay for ORC and Act. Duty Rank

By a decision of the Comptroller General, officers on duty in the AUS under temporary wartime appointment may accept appointments in higher grades in the ORC without vacating their temporary appointments as long as they are not called to active duty under their reserve corps appointments.

The official digest of the decision follows:

"Officers serving on active duty in the Army of the United States, without component, under temporary wartime appointments made pursuant to the act of 22 September 1941, as amended, may accept appointments in higher grades in the Officers' Reserve Corps under section 37 of the National Defense Act, as amended, without thereby vacating their temporary appointments under which they will continue to serve on active duty until termination thereof by operation of law, so long as such officers are not called to active duty under their reserve corps appointments.

"Officers serving on active duty in the Army of the United States under temporary wartime appointments made pursuant to the act of 22 September 1941, as amended, who receive appointments in higher grades in the Officers' Reserve Corps under section 37 of the National Defense Act, as amended, without being called to active duty as reserve officers, would have no valid claim for the pay, allowances, etc., of their higher grade in the Officers' Reserve Corps, while continuing to serve under their temporary appointments."

Release of Hospital Corpsmen

Progress of the Navy's training program for Hospital Corpsmen will permit the release of all USNR and USN-1 Hospital Corpsmen by 15 Jan. 1947. Groups of 500 will be released on the first of each month as they complete 18 months of active duty.

Chaplains' Association Elects

After voting to instruct its Executive Committee to make a study of the rank status of Chaplains in the Armed Forces, the Chaplains Association concluded its convention in Washington 25 Oct. with the election of Chaplain R. J. White, USNR, as president for the ensuing year.

The invitation of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of San Antonio, Texas, to hold the 1947 convention in that city was accepted, and the dates were left to the Association's Executive Committee for decision. The 1948 convention was voted to be held in New York City, the date to be decided as for San Antonio.

Other officers elected were: Vice-Presidents, (one for each Army Area): 1st—Comdr. Francis V. Sullivan, USNR; 2nd—Lt. Col. Frederick C. Reynolds, National Guard; 3rd—Lt. Col. Richard L. Alexander, Ch. Res.; 4th—Capt. Thomas F. Corcoran, Ch. Res.; 5th—Capt. William J. Monahan, Ch. Res.; 6th—Capt. Clifford N. Drury, USNR.

Vice Presidents-at-large were named as follows: Lt. Col. Bernard Segal, AUS; Capt. Frank L. White, AUS; Capt. James V. Claypool, USNR.

Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, speaking on the subject "The Chaplaincy," credited the first Chief of Chaplains, John T. Axton, with having raised the position of chaplain to the dignity it now has. Rabbi Lazaron said that a chaplain must be a minister, the liaison between the Army and Navy and civilians in church circles, and the exponent of cooperation among creedal faiths and variations of race. "All else is secondary to putting on the whole armor of God," he said.

Posing the claim that "We are to live to work together," the Rabbi asserted "We are not going to save the soul of America by expressions of hatred even against fascism and communism. Hatred will drive us downward. We must receive the winds as they come from all directions." But, he said, "The American experiment is the finest experiment in government."

During the business meeting, Chaplain (Maj.) Harold G. Elsam, Executive-Secretary of the Chaplains Association, was awarded, by the War Department, the Army Commendation Ribbon for meritorious service. The Chief of Chaplains, Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller made the presentation.

Resolutions adopted were:

1. The Chaplains Association of the Army and Navy of the United States recognizes with grateful humility the hand and purpose of Almighty God in bringing to an end the recent war and offering us in these United States an opportunity to pursue with our fellowmen throughout the world the ways of peace. To this glorious task we pledge our full devotion.

2. We command for their zeal, wisdom, and devotion, the former Chiefs of Chaplains of the Army and the Navy, William R. Arnold and Robert D. Workman, and their staffs; the present Chiefs, Luther D. Miller and William N. Thomas, and their staffs; and, the President of the Association for his eight and one-half years of high leadership, and his staff, all of whom have carried on in faithfulness and self-sacrifice. To these, our fellow chaplains, we extend the deep gratitude of a thankful nation for their inestimable contribution to the nation's cause.

3. With reference to that section of the President's address referring to changes in rank status of chaplains, we recommend that this matter be referred to the Executive Committee of the Association for their study and consideration in counsel with the Chiefs of Chaplains and their staffs.

4. The Chaplains' Association views with profound concern the lowering of moral standards in our great nation and the weakening of its moral conscience. We, therefore, recommend that the President of the Association appoint a committee of five, which shall formulate a strong and definite statement reasserting the basic moral principles of our great religious faiths and calling upon our people everywhere to return in sincerity and humility to the ways and will of God. We recommend that this committee be appointed at this convention and that this pronouncement be forthcoming without delay and be given the widest public distribution.

5. We recommend that proper representations be made to military authorities to the end that provision be made for adequate housing facilities for all chaplains commensurate with their personal needs and their official functions as chaplains.

6. We recommend that suitable provision be made on each post, ship, military, naval, and veterans installations for the exercise of religious obligations peculiar to the needs of the respective faiths served by our chaplains.

7. We recommend that the Executive Committee consider ways and means of securing and maintaining in Washington, D. C., a Chaplains' Foundation House for offices, headquarters, staff, conference, and transient house and possible club facilities.

8. We recommend the wholehearted endorsement of the National Campaign for the Nurses National Memorial and we urge all chaplains to lend their support to this worthy project.

9. We commend the practice at the Chaplains' School of providing opportunity for information to the chaplains on matters respecting the various faiths through joint denominational conferences. We recommend that opportunity be provided any major faith not represented on the faculty to supply information through properly designated representatives concerning the religious needs of the men of that faith.

10. We recommend that thorough consideration be given to the religious education of all military personnel and their families and that chaplains in training be specially prepared, through courses in religious education, to carry on an intensive program of this character. And we further recommend, for the consideration of the Chaplains' Board now in session in Ft. Oglethorpe, the preparation of a religious educational manual.

11. We recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

"The Chaplains' Association of the Army and Navy of the United States, in convention assembled at Washington, D. C., October 23rd to 25th, 1946, sends greetings to the United Nations Assembly Meeting in New York City, and asks God's blessings upon its deliberations and purposes, and prays that the ideals of world unity and peace for which our comrades have sacrificed and died may soon be realized."

12. We recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

"The Chaplains' Association of the Army and Navy of the United States in its first postwar convention sends its heart-felt sympathy to all the families of our nation whose homes have been saddened by the loss of beloved ones, and offers its earnest prayer that they may be sustained and comforted by God's presence and strengthened by the assurance that their loved ones have not died in vain."

13. In conclusion, we, as Chaplains in the service of our country, pledge ourselves before God and our fellow countrymen to pursue as in the days of war so also in the days of peace our obligations, our responsibilities, and our duties as ministers of the Most High God.

Navy Day Messages

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal on 30 October dispatched an ALNAV to the Service, saying: "Navy Day 1946 was marked by a splendid demonstration of the mission and work of the Navy to the American people. It was successful because All Hands enthusiastically participated. Well done."

The following Navy Day messages were released 27 Oct.:

The Honorable Harry S. Truman, President of the United States—"On this Navy Day I join a grateful nation in paying tribute to the United States Navy and in honoring the memory of those who were lost at sea in the service of their country. In remembering the sacrifices of the men who went down to sea in ships, let us pray God to imbue us with something of their unconquerable spirit, that we may better contribute to the realization of that day when all nations will live in brotherhood and in the assurance of lasting peace."

"The American people are well acquainted with the splendid record set by their Navy throughout its 171 years of outstanding service. With the readjustment to peace, the Navy faces new responsibilities. Victory has been attained, but the Navy's mission is not completed. The Peace must be safeguarded. Our sacrifices in past wars must not have been in vain."

"Therefore, today, let us resolve to keep ever in mind those fundamentals, ideals, and principles for which our nation stands. Your Navy stands firmly behind those principles and will defend our security with every means at hand."

The Honorable David I. Walsh, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs—

"Since 1812 when the British troops crossed the sea in ships and brought war to our shores, our nation has maintained a Navy capable of meeting and defeating an enemy far from our shores.

"In the period between World War I and World War II aviation enthusiasts predicted the war of the future would be won by the use of airplanes alone. They urged us to cease spending money on ships and to rely entirely for our security upon these new weapons. A more prudent course was followed, however. Naval aviation was integrated with sea power to form a sea-air power team. This team as employed by the Navy during the recent war was a vital element in carrying the war to our enemies and defeating both Germany and Japan.

"The advent of the atomic bomb has stimulated the imaginations of many groups in this country. They predict that future wars will be fought between nations equipped with robot planes, atomic rockets, and radioactive gasses.

"An evaluation of the atomic bomb tests made at Bikini last summer indicate that some changes must be made in the design of ships and in their tactical employment. These tests do not indicate that ships and navies are obsolete. A more realistic attitude to take towards the atomic bomb is that navies will probably not become obsolete until the sea is no longer used as a highway in war for the transport of troops and materials of war, and as a highway in peace for the exchange of goods.

"New weapons, new tactics of fighting, etc., will undoubtedly emerge in the future as a result of the discovery of methods of utilizing atomic energy. If we eschew fixed ideas and opinions, reorient our thinking to face new situations, and reevaluate the facts, we shall be able to maintain an up-to-date Navy. On Navy Day let us resolve to employ scientific methods of thinking in providing ourselves with an efficient Navy and of maintaining and operating it, and if we do this, our Navy will in the future, as it has for the past one hundred and thirty years, prevent any enemy from bringing the horrors of war to our homeland."

The Honorable Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of War—"On this Navy Day, I am pleased to extend the heartiest felicitations of the Army to you and to the officers and enlisted men of the United States Navy.

"The outstanding contribution of the Navy to our victory in war and peace has earned the deep and abiding gratitude of all of our people. Please accept my best wishes for an outstandingly successful observance of Navy Day."

The Honorable John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury—"On this Navy Day of 1946, I find it hard to conjure words which might possibly add to the tribute already paid to your fighting organization by liberty-loving men and women in every land and every clime. I can, however, join with you in a fervent hope that out of last year's victory of arms will presently emerge an international order which will permit succeeding generations of mankind to walk the paths of freedom in a world at peace.

"The unforgettable deeds of valor performed by the Navy's honored dead fashioned their own memorials in the hearts and minds of mankind. I am sure that the Navy of today will carry forward, with similar loyalty, the inspiring traditions for which these patriots laid down their lives.

"Now, fifteen months after the collapse of tyranny in the waters of the Orient, it gives me pleasure to extend hearty congratulations to you and to the gallant men of our great Navy."

General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army—"On the occasion of the Navy's 171st birthday, may I extend to you and to all Navy personnel the admiration and best wishes of the U. S. Army. In peace or war, we take great pride in your accomplishments and in our close association and comradeship with the brave and patriotic men who sustain American rights and traditions on the seven seas."

General Jacob L. Devers, Commanding General, Army Ground Forces—"The Army Ground Forces is proud to salute another member of the victorious team of American armed forces of World War II—the U. S. Navy—on this 25th observance of Navy Day. Without the cooperation of the Navy, the Air Forces, and the Ground Forces, this last war could not have been won.

"As we enter upon what all of us hope will be an era of lasting peace, we would do well to emulate the spirit of teamwork which characterized the war-time operations of our Navy, Air Forces and Ground Forces. That teamwork would have delighted the late Theodore Roosevelt, principal advocate of the modern Navy, whose birthday on October 27, 1858, is commemorated by Navy Day."
